CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCH.

The Christian Science church was founded in 1879 by Mary Baker Eddy, the discoverer of Christian science and author of its text-book, "Science and Health, with Key to the Scriptures." The church was organized "to commemorate the word and works of our Master, which should reinstate primitive Christianity and its lost element of healing" (Church Manual). In 1892 the church was reorganized as the First Church of Christ, Scientist, known as the mother church, in Boston, Mass. The present officers of the mother church are:

President—Judge Clifford P. Smith.
Clerk—John V. Dittemore.
Treasurer—Stephen A. Chase.
Directors—Archibald McLellan, Allison V. Stewart, Stephen A. Chase, John V. Dittemore, Adam H. Dickey.

All Christian science churches and societies, of which there are now 1,260 in the United States and 135 in foreign countries, are branches of the mother church. Lesson-sermons compiled from the bible and "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" are read at the services in Christian science churches. There are about 5,000 Christian science practitioners regularly devoting their time to the practice of Christian science mind healing.

Mrs. Eddy founded the Christian Science Journal, Sentinel, Quarterly, Der Herold der Christian Science and The Christian Science Monitor (a daily newspaper), all of which are published by the Christian Science Publishing society in Boston.

There is in connection with the Christian science movement an official board of lectureship designed to furnish the public correct information concerning the fundamental teachings of Christian science. Lectures given by members of this board are free to the public.

There are in Chicago ten Christian science churches having an average total attendance of about 12,000. Each of these churches maintains a free reading room in addition to a joint reading room at 81 East Madison street, where the public may have free access to all authorized publications on the subject of Christian science.

The offices of the Christian science committee on publication and the Christian science committee for the distribution of literature in Chicago are in the Orchestra building, 220 South Michigan avenue.

RELIGIONS OF THE WORLD.

According to the revised (1898) edition of Mulhall's Dictionary of Statistics there are 476,100,000 Christians in the world. The same authority places the number of Roman catholics in Europe, America and Australia at 223,090,000; protestants, 157,050,000, and Greeks, 88,660,000. It has been estimated that there are in the world 256,000,000 followers of Confucius, 190,000,000 Hindoos, 176,800,000 Mohammedans, 148,000,000 Buddhists, 118,000,000 polytheists, 43,000,000 Taoists, 14,000,000 Shintoists and 12,000,000 Jews. Of the Christians more than 230,000,000 are catholics, 98,300,000 orthodox Greeks, 70,000,000 Lutherans, 21,000,000 episcopalians, 17,000,000 methodists, 11,000,000 baptists, 9,000,000 presbyterians and 4,500,000 congregationalists.

EPIDEMICS IN 1911.

PNEUMONIC PLAGUE IN MANCHURIA.

Beginning in October, 1919, and continuing until February, 1911, a pneumonic plague of almost unexampled virulence raged in the northern provinces of China. It was especially violent in Manchuria, nearly 4,000 perishing in the city of Fuchiaten alone. In Harbin about 1,000 persons, including eighteen Europeans, died from the disease. The total number of victims was estimated at 46,000, practically all who were attacked died, as only five recoveries were recorded.

Business in the infected districts came to a standstill and for a time railway traffic in Manchuria was suspended. One or two cases of the plague occurred in Pekin in January, causing a panic among the native and foreign residents of the capital. Many of the latter, including members of the diplomatic corps, fled from the city, while others shut themselves up in the legation quarter, around which a quarantine line was established. The disease did not spread, however, and the alarm subsided.

Beginning April 3 an international medical conference was held in Mukden to consider the causes of the plague and its possible cure. Forty delegates, representing eleven powers, including the United States, were present. It was generally agreed that the disease was communicated to human beings by a species of marmot called tarabang, which is extensively hunted in Mongolia and Manchuria for its fur. It was clearly established that hunters were the first victims and that the plague was spread by the hunters going from place to place. There was some difference of opinion as to whether the disease was communicated by direct contact, but it seemed to be established that the exhalations and moist sputum of the victims were highly infective. The most effective preventive, it was agreed, was the establishment of strict quarantine. It was shown that rats did not carry the disease as in the case of the bubonic plague.

Though little is known of the action of the pneumonic plague bacillus, it is thought that the virulent toxin created by the bacillus during germination and quicky introduced into the system, acts upon the nerves, affecting the heart. After the first symptom appears the disease progresses with great rapidity, and it is supposed that the poison hardly has time to weaken the victim to an extremity. As death approaches a comatose state is brought on in which the sufferer becomes so weak as to stagger and fall wherever he may happen to be. Though there is pain in the lungs, it is not the pneumonia, but the poison in the blood that kills. Death may come in a few hours or in a day or two. The enlargement of the glands in the neck and groins, which is a characteristic symptom of bubonic plague, is absent in the pneumonic variety.

ASIATIC CHOLERA IN THE UNITED STATES.

In July, 1911, vessels arriving from infected ports in Italy brought a number of passengers suffering from Asiatic cholera to America. Most of them were immigrants or seamen, who had contracted the disease in the course of the voyage across the Atlantic. Strict precautions were taken at the quarantine stations in New York, Boston, Philadelphia and other Atlantic seaports and most of the cases were confined to the quarantine hospitals. The disease in a few instances broke through the quarantine and several deaths occurred outside the detention hospitals. One of the earliest was that of Tomaso Biradi, an Italian youth, who died in Auburn, N. Y., June 20. Manuel Bermudez, a sailor from a tramp steamer, was removed from Bellevue hospital, New York, July 22, suffering from cholera and there was much fear that the disease would spread throughout the city. Patrick Cushing died in a hospital on Staten Island, N. Y., July 15. The greatest number of deaths occurred on Swinburne island, New York, to which suspected cases from the Moltke, Perugia, Oceania and other steamers arriving from Italian ports were taken. Up to July 19 seven of the patients had succumbed out of the score or more treated. July 23, Mrs. T. Mastrodoceno, who had taken as lodgers two Italian sailors, died from cholera at the detention hospital on Gallup's island at Boston. The precautions taken by the authorities at the various ports proved effective and the disease was prevented from obtaining a foothold on the American side of the Atlantic.

CHOLERA IN ITALY.

While European Russia was practically exempt from cholera in 1911 the disease continued its ravages in Italy. The situation seemed to be worst in Palermo and Naples, where many cases and deaths were reported in June and July. The disease also claimed a considerable number of victims in Leghorn, Spezia, Brescia and Pisa. Between June 7 and Aug. 26, 800 cases were reported in Leghorn alone, the majority of the cases proving fatal. Between Aug. 20 and Aug. 26 there were 1,635 cases reported throughout Italy and 593 deaths.

PLAGUE IN INDIA.

In the half year ended June 30, 1911, deaths from the plague in India reached the enormous total of 650,690. The disease has become such a fixture in many of the provinces that but little is said of it and it is only heard of occasionally through official reports. The efforts of the British authorities to stamp out the epidemic have failed to produce any marked result for the better.

PROCEEDINGS AGAINST STEEL CORPORATION.

Suit was brought by the federal government in the United States Circuit court at Trenton, N. J., Oct. 26, 1911, to dissolve the United States Steel corporation and all its constituent or subsidiary companies. The following men were made defendants:

J. Pierpont Morgan.	James Gayley.
John D. Rockefeller.	William H. Moore.
Andrew Carnegie.	J. H. Moore.
Charles M. Schwab.	E. C. Converse.
George W. Perkins.	Percival Roberts, Jr.
E. H. Gary.	Daniel G. Reid.
J. D. Rockefeller, Jr.	Norman B. Ream.
Henry C. Frick.	P. A. B. Widener.
Charles Steele.	William P. Palmer.

The subsidiary companies named in the suit as defendants were:
Carnegie Steel company.
Carnegie Company of New Jersey.
Federal Steel company.
National Steel company.
American Steel and Wire Company of New Jersey.
National Tube company.
Shelby Steel Tube company.
American Tinplate company.
American Sheet and Tinplate company.
American Sheet Steel company.
American Steel Hoop company.
American Bridge company.
Lake Superior Consolidated Iron mines.
H. C. Frick Coke company.
Tennessee Coal and Iron and Railroad company.
Great Western Mining company.
Louis W. Hill, James J. Hill, Walter J. Hill, E. T. Nichols and J. H. Gruber were named as trustees in connection with ore companies.

The government in its bill asked:
That the corporation and its alleged conspiracy and monopolization be adjudged unlawful.
That each and all of the defendants, their officers, directors, stockholders or agents be perpetually enjoined from doing any act for carrying out the conspiracy and monopolization complained of.
That the United States Steel corporation of itself as well as each and all of the elements composing it, whether separate or individual, be decreed illegal and that the corporation be dissolved.
That the ore lease of the Great Northern properties in the Mesaba range be declared illegal.

The government's bill went minutely into the history of the United States Steel corporation and made a number of charges, of which the following is a summary:

The acquisition by the corporation of the Tennessee Coal and Iron company during the panic of 1907 was illegal. If President Roosevelt had been fully advised he would have known that a desire to stop the panic was not the sole moving cause, but there was a desire and purpose to acquire control of a dangerous competitor.

Henry C. Frick and E. H. Gary, when they went to the white house in 1907 to get President Roosevelt's approval of the plan to absorb the Tennessee concern, willfully misled the president when they told him that little benefit would accrue to the Steel corporation through the purchase.

The power and control that have been exerted by the Steel corporation, largely through the grasp of tentacles thrown out upon consumers, competitors and capital, are incompatible with the healthy commercial life of the nation.

By its acquisition of the company the corporation eliminated a competitor and unlawfully gained a power which is a menace to the welfare of the country, and which should be destroyed.

By its system of interchangeable directorships the corporation is in direct touch with all the large railroad and steamship companies of the United States, and with such powerful concerns as the Standard Oil company, the Pullman company, the International Harvester company and the Western Union Telegraph company, as well as with the overwhelming majority in money and power in the banks and trust companies of the country. The possibilities of the power and control that may thus be exerted over trade and commerce are inestimable

AMERICAN-EUROPEAN LOAN TO CHINA.

The papers providing for the loan of $50,000,000 to China by a group of American and European financiers were signed in Pekin April 15, 1911. The money was to be used in furthering currency reforms and other interests of the empire. By an imperial edict issued Oct. 29, 1910, American financiers alone were to make the loan, receiving in return bonds maturing in from forty to forty-five years and bearing 5 per cent interest. Later it was agreed that three banking groups in England, Germany and France should participate in the loan, which is secured by the provincial revenues. The banking houses concerned are the Morgan, the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking company, the Bank of Indo-China and the German East Asiatic bank.

RUSSO-CHINESE CONTROVERSY.

Feb. 16, 1911, Russia notified Great Britain, France and Germany of its intention to make a military demonstration on the Russo-Chinese frontier owing to China's persistent violation of the St. Petersburg treaty of 1881. This treaty was then about to expire and China was not willing to renew it until certain modifications had been made. The provisions of the convention which Russia claimed had been violated were these:

1. Russia's right to impose import and export duties unlimited, except in the fifty verst zone, which is free.

2. That the extraterritorial rights of Russians shall not be infringed; that legal suits involving Russians and Chinese shall be considered by a mixed jurisdiction.

3. That Russians shall enjoy special privileges of trade and duty free commerce in Mongolia and the extrawall provinces.

4. That Russian consulates can be immediately opened at Kobdo, Knami and Guchen.

5. Due respect of the local authorities for Russian consuls.

6. Russians to enjoy the right to acquire real estate and erect structures in Mongolia and the extrawall provinces.

It was announced that the first demonstration would be made in the province of Ili (also called Kulja) in the western part of Mongolia. This province had been occupied by the Russians since 1871, but was restored to the Chinese by the treaty of 1881.

After some weeks of negotiations China finally announced that it would comply fully with the Russian demands and carry out the treaty as interpreted in St. Petersburg. The projected demonstration did not take place.

MOTORING.

[Compiled by C. G. Sinsabaugh.]

The season of 1911 goes down into history as the most active of all and the most remarkable, too. The speed of the automobile has been demonstrated in a most sensational manner and marks established that would have been deemed impossible a year or so ago. Every one thought the speed limit was reached when Barney Oldfield in the Blitzen Benz traveled a mile over the sands at Daytona, Fla., at the rate of 131.28 miles an hour, yet the man who stepped into his shoes when he was dethroned, Bob Burman, took the same car and cut Oldfield's mile mark from :27.33 to :25.40, equal to 141.73 miles per hour. Both the speedway and the dirt track mile records also were lowered by this same Burman, but not to such an appreciable extent. The speedway mile was reduced from :35.62 to :35.35, and the dirt track mile from :48.92 to :48.62.

In the way of long distance performances there were two that stood out above all others—the 500 mile race on the Indianapolis speedway on May 30, and the twenty-four hour race on the Los Angeles speedway. The 500 mile race was remarkable from the fact that the first prize was $10,000 in cash. Forty cars started and twelve finished, the winner being Ray Harroun of Chicago in the Marmon Wasp, who averaged 74.7 miles per hour; Mulford in the Lozier was second; David Bruce-Brown in the Fiat was third; Spencer Wishart, Mercedes, fourth; Joe Dawson, Marmon, fifth; Ralph de Palma, Simplex, sixth; Charles Merz, National, seventh; C. Turner, Amplex, eighth; F. Belcher, Knox, ninth; H. Cobe, Jackson, tenth; Gil Anderson, Stutz, eleventh; Hugh Hughes, Mercer, twelfth.

The twenty-four hour race at Los Angeles was the only twice around the clock race of the year, the Fiat winning with a mark of 1,491 miles, while the runner-up was a thirty horse power American car, the Cadillac, which covered 1,448 miles. This, by the way, is the only twenty-four hour race ever run on a speedway, the track itself being a one mile circular board affair.

More activity than ever was shown in a road racing way, there being twenty-seven of these events contested on American roads in 1911. The big meet of the year was at Savannah, where the Grand Prix, Vanderbilt, Savannah cup and Tiedeman trophy events were contested. The national stock chassis road races again were run at Elgin, Ill., by the Chicago Motor club. Len Zengel in a National won the Elgin national trophy, Donald Herr in a National took the Illinois cup, Hugh Hughes in a Mercer the Kane county cup and Mortimer Roberts in an Abbott-Detroit the Aurora cup. Sensational speed was shown in the road races at Los Angeles, where the world's record was beaten twice. Charles Merz in a National first beat Nazzaro's mark of 74.3 miles per hour, raising it to 74.42, while in the free for all that followed Harvey Herrick in a National jumped this to 74.62 miles per hour, the distance covered being 202 miles. The annual Fairmount park road race was run at Philadelphia and the winner was Erwin Bergdoll, a young millionaire who races for the fun of it, in a Benz.

Racing on circular tracks built for horse racing received more than one black eye during 1911, because of the fatalities that attended this sport. Among the prominent drivers who were killed on the dirt ovals were Marcel Basle at Chicago, Walter Donnelly at Milwaukee and W. H. Pearce at Sioux City, Iowa. At Syracuse, Lee Oldfield (no relation of Barney) plunged through the fence and twelve spectators were killed.

CHICAGO COMPETITIONS.

The competition season in Chicago started with the fuel economy test to Milwaukee and back, promoted by the Chicago Motor club, which returned as winners the Moline in the touring car class, the Grout in the roadster class, the Corbin in the development class and the Brush in the free for all, with 19.3, 18.5, 27.4 and 35.2 miles per gallon, respectively. Then came the Chicago Motor club's annual climb at Algonquin, June 9, in which the Algonquin cup was won by E. A. Hearne in a Benz, lowering the record on the morning hill to :16⅘. The fourth annual reliability team match between the Chicago Athletic association and the Chicago Automobile club, to Janesville, Wis., and return, was run June 15-16 and was won by the Cherry circle with a score of 284.5 to 685, twenty-two cars representing the C. A. A. and thirteen the C. A. C. The Chicago Motor club followed with a team match on July 18-19 to St. Joseph, Mich, and return, the teams representing the amateurs and the tradesmen. The Banta trophy was won by the amateurs with a score of 225 against 329, the amateurs having fourteen cars and the tradesmen sixteen.

The national stock chassis road races were run at Elgin on Aug. 25-26 and returned as winners Zengel in the National, Herr in the National, Hughes in the Mercer and Roberts in the Abbott-Detroit. Following this the Chicago Motor club put on a three-day commercial motor vehicle demonstration Sept. 18-19-20, which proved a most successful affair. The season wound up with the Chicago Motor club's fifth annual reliability, which went 1,350 miles through five different states. The touring car class resulted in a tie between F. G. Salisbury in a Moline and E. Knudsen in a Staver-Chicago, both with perfect scores. The Van Sicklen cup in the roadster division was won for the second time by the Moline, J. A. Wicke driving. The fuel economy test for the Standard Oil trophy was won by the Grout and the team trophy by the Moline.

THE GLIDDEN TOUR.

Early in the spring of 1911 it looked as if there would be no more Glidden tours. Then it was arranged to run the classic from Washington, D. C., to Ottawa, the capital of Canada. Entries were scarce, and after the trail had been laid a postponement was necessary. Then the good roads folk of the south got after the American Automobile association and induced it to change its plans and run the Glidden from New York city to Jacksonville, Fla. The rules were changed, the stock car proposition being abandoned. Instead of being an individual competition, as it was in 1910, when the Chalmers won it, it became a team event. There were sixty-four starters, and eighteen teams, representing various cities, took part. Forty-seven finished at Jacksonville, Fla., after a most strenuous run. The Tarrytown (N. Y.) team, made up of three Maxwell cars, won the Glidden trophy, while the Anderson trophy, put up for individual contest, went to No. 4 Maxwell. Class winners included the Ford, Flanders, Mitchell, Maxwell, Stevens-Duryea, Columbia and American. The tour was marred by an accident which resulted in the death of Samuel M. Butler, chairman of the contest board of the American Automobile association, who was killed when the car in which he was riding turned turtle.

VANDERBILT CUP RACE.

The conditions of the Vanderbilt cup race in 1909 were changed. Racing cars were barred and the event was open only to stock cars up to 600 cubic inches piston displacement. This race was run Oct. 30 over the Long Island motor parkway course. It was won by Harry F. Grant in a sixty-horse-power Alco car in 4:25:42, or an average speed for the 278.08 miles of 62.85 miles an hour. In 1910 Grant, in the Alco, again won. Conditions again were changed and the race was open to cars under 600 cubic inches piston displacement. It virtually was a free-for-all, although the first five to finish were stock cars. In 1911 the Vanderbilt was run at Savannah, Ga.

FOREIGN ROAD RACES.

No longer do the foreigners support road racing on the gigantic scale of former years. Only two or three minor events were run in 1911, the contesting machines being mostly small cars. The James Gordon Bennett, the French Grand Prix, the Florio cup, the Emperor's cup—they're all memories of the days when France reigned almost supreme in the speed world. Those classics are only history now and the records show the following winners of the two most important, the Bennett and the Grand Prix:

TWENTY-FOUR-HOUR RECORDS.

The world's record for twenty four hours is 1,581 miles 1,310 yards, an average pace of 65.9 miles an hour, made June 28-29, 1907, by S. F. Edge in a six-cylinder Napier on the three and one-quarter mile cement track at Weybridge, England.

The circular-track twenty-four-hour record was raised to 1,253 miles by Patschke and Poole in a Stearns at Brighton Beach track, New York, Aug. 19-20, 1910. The former record was 1,196 miles, made by Patschke and Mulford, in a Lozier, in 1909.

An American competitive speedway twenty-four hour record was created at Los Angeles, where a Fiat covered 1,491 miles.

TRANSCONTINENTAL RECORD.

A record of 10 days 18 hours 12 minutes from New York to San Francisco was made Aug. 8-18, 1910, by L. L. Whitman, driving a four-cylinder Reo, the fastest trip ever made across the continent in a motor car. The record from San Francisco to New York is 15 days 12 hours, made in a Franklin in 1906 by Whitman.

CHICAGO-NEW YORK RECORD.

The record by automobile between Chicago and New York is 39:53:00. It was made by a Franklin twenty-eight horse-power runabout Aug. 21-22, 1907. The route followed was via Elkhart, Cleveland, Erie, Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse, Utica, Newburgh and along the east side of the Hudson to New York. The distance was 1,050 miles. The previous record was 56:58:00, also made by a Franklin, a six-cylinder car.

Joe Baribeau rode 100 miles on a one mile dirt track at Winnipeg, Manitoba, Oct. 14, 1911, in 1:46:14⅘, lowering the world's record by nearly two minutes.

BALLOONING.

CONTEST FOR BENNETT CUP.

The sixth international race for the James Gordon Bennett cup started from Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 5, 1911. There were six entries as follows:

France—Condor, Emile Dubonnet, pilot; Pierre Dupont, aid.

Germany—Berlin I., Lieut. Leopold Vogt, pilot; Lieut. Schoeller, aid. Berlin II., Lieut. Hans Gericke, pilot; J. O. Dunker, aid.

United States—Buckeye, Lieut. Frank P. Lahm, pilot; J. H. Wade, Jr., aid. Million Population Club, William F. Assman, pilot; J. C. Hurlburt, aid. America II., John Berry, pilot; Paul McCullough, aid.

The contestants got away to a good start and were carried rapidly in a northerly direction by a strong breeze. Stormy weather was encountered later and all the balloons were compelled to come to the ground sooner than would otherwise have been the case. The race was won by Hans Gericke in the Berlin II., who landed near Ladysmith, Wis., Oct. 7, after traveling 471 miles. The other balloons in the contest landed Oct 6, as follows:

Condor, Mingo, Iowa, 200 miles.
America II., Emmetsburg, Iowa, 293 miles.
Million Population Club, Mason City, Iowa, 275 miles.
Berlin I., Austin, Minn., 350 miles.
Buckeye, Sparta, Wis., 408 miles.

Two balloons which contested for the Lahm cup landed as follows:

Topeka II., Dunnell, Minn., 325 miles.
Kansas City II., Kennan, Wis., 460 miles.

ELIMINATION RACE.

In the national elimination balloon race which started from Kansas City, Mo., July 10, 1911, to select entries for the James Gordon Bennett cup race Oct. 4, six balloons competed. The two making the greatest distance were to represent America in the international contest, together with Alan R. Hawley of New York, winner of the 1910 race. The result as officially announced was as follows:

St. Louis IV.—Distance, 480 miles; time in air, 22 hours 26 minutes.
Million Population—415 miles, 16 hours 26 minutes.
Buckeye—288 miles, 21 hours, 38 minutes.
Topeka II.—210 miles, 14 hours 42 minutes.
Kansas City—193 miles, 8 hours 5 minutes.
New York—186 miles, 8 hours 58 minutes.

The St. Louis IV. landed near LaPaz Junction, Ind., and the Million Population at LaCrosse, Ind., July 11.

RECORD FOR DISTANCE.

The record for distance traveled in a balloon in continuous flight was gained by Count de la Vaulx in 1900, when he made a trip of 1,193 miles. He started in France and landed in Russia. The American record is held by Alan R. Hawley and Augustus Post, who made 1,171 miles, Oct. 17-19, 1910, when competing for the James Gordon Bennett cup. They started at St. Louis, Mo., and landed near Lake Piscocama in the province of Quebec, Canada.

The record for distance traveled in a dirigible balloon is held by Walter Wellman, who, on Oct. 15-18, 1910, made approximately 1,000 miles in an attempt to cross the Atlantic in the America.

TRAVELED 800 MILES.

The balloon Miss Sophia, in charge of W. F. Assman and J. M. O'Reilly, St. Louis aeronauts, left San Antonio, Tex., at 6:47 p. m., Feb. 25, 1911, landed on a farm at Gower, Mo., at 5:15 p. m. the following day. The distance traveled was approximately 800 miles. Part of the trip was through a snowstorm.

GERMANY, FRANCE AND MOROCCO.

The conflicting interests of France and Germany in Morocco led to such strained relations between the two countries in 1911 that war seemed imminent on several occasions. The most critical time was July 1, when Germany notified France and the powers that it had sent the gunboat Panther to Agadir, the most southerly point of Morocco, on the plea that it might be necessary to land troops there for the protection of German merchants. This was accepted by France and its ally, Great Britain, as an act of defiance and the situation became critical. Premier Asquith made a statement in the house of commons July 27 in which he intimated that it might become the duty of the British government to intervene in defense of British interests.

The negotiations were conducted by Ambassador Cambon for France and by Herr Kiderlen-Waechter, foreign minister, for Germany. Slow progress was made on account of what France believed to be the extortionate demands of Germany, but an agreement was reached toward the end of October and the tension relieved. By the terms of the convention Germany recognized the existence of a French protectorate over Morocco. In return France gave Germany a portion of the French Kongo in Africa and further guaranteed German commercial interests equality of opportunity in Morocco. Both governments stipulated that difficulties arising out of the application of the agreement should be referred to the tribunal at The Hague for settlement.

The agreement caused great dissatisfaction in Germany among all parties and led to the resignation of a number of officials. Crown Prince Frederick William was among those who emphatically disapproved of the treaty.

AERONAUTICAL PROGRESS IN 1911.

AERONAUTICAL PROGRESS IN 1911.

Many wonderful achievements were placed to the credit of aviators in 1911, but these were chiefly in the line of long cross country flights or of altitude and duration records. The main thing demonstrated, however, was the fact that heavier-than-air machines are unsafe and that until greater stability has been secured they cannot be put to practical use except, perhaps, for scouting in time of war. Their utility for this purpose was shown in the Tripoli campaign, where the Italians were able to observe the movements of the Turks and Arabs by means of aeroplanes. Toward the close of the year the Wright brothers, pioneers in the science of aviation, conducted a series of experiments which indicated that the desired stability was in a fair way of being secured. Another advance may be noted, namely, the invention of aeroplanes that can alight on or rise from the water. Below will be found accounts of some of the more remarkable performances of the year, with the latest available records on both sides of the Atlantic, a list of casualties and a chronological record of aeronautical events in 1911.

LONG-DISTANCE FLIGHTS.

FROM ST. LOUIS TO NEW YORK.

Harry N. Atwood of Boston broke the world's record (up to Aug. 25, 1911) for cross country flying in an aeroplane when he traveled from St. Louis, Mo., to New York city, via Chicago, a distance of 1,265 miles, in twelve days. He left the Missouri city Aug. 14, 1911, and arrived at Governor's island in New York harbor Aug. 25. His time in the air was 28 hours 9 minutes. For this feat he was given a prize of $10,000, offered by Victor J. Evans of Washington, D. C. The previous world's record for cross country flying was 1,164 miles, made in 30 days by Benno Koenig in Germany, June 11-July 10, 1911. Atwood's best performance was on the first day of his aerial journey, when he made the distance of 282 miles in less than six hours of flying time in one day. He had but one serious mishap to his machine, a break in the propeller, which compelled him to land at Nyack, N. Y., when only twenty-five miles from his goal. Atwood used a Wright-Burgess biplane. In Chicago he arrived at and started from Grant park, on the lake front, where the great aviation meet was being held.

FROM NEW YORK CITY TO PASADENA, CAL.

Calbraith P. Rodgers eclipsed all records for long distance aeroplane flying when he crossed the American continent from Sheepshead Bay, N. Y., to Pasadena, Cal., between Sept. 17 and Nov. 5, 1911. The distance covered was approximately 4,231 miles, the total time occupied 49 days, the actual flying time 82 hours 4 minutes, and the average distance per hour, 51.7 miles. His machine, a baby Wright biplane, was damaged on a number of occasions, but was quickly repaired, either by himself or by the mechanics who followed him by train. Bad weather was responsible for most of the delay. His general route was by way of Chicago, Kansas City, San Antonio, El Paso, Maricopa and Imperial Junction. Further details of the record breaking journey may be obtained from the following daily record of the flight:

BOSTON TO WASHINGTON.

Harry N. Atwood started from Boston, Mass., June 23, 1911, for New London, Conn., 135 miles away, arriving there the same day. June 30 he gave exhibitions of flying at the intercollegiate boat races on the New London course. Saturday, July 1, he started at 7:05 a. m., and flew over Bridgeport, Conn., at a height of 1,500 feet. Then he steered out over Long Island sound, passing South Norwalk and Port Chester. At Larchmont, which was reached at 9:15 a. m., he steered inland over Mount Vernon and then flew over the city of New York. Partly circling the lofty Singer building tower, he hovered over Wall street for a few moments and then proceeded to Governor's island where he landed. The total distance traveled was 122 miles and the time was 3 hours 20 minutes.

July 4 Atwood left Governor's island at 8:49 a. m., and at 2:30 p. m. landed at Atlantic City, N. J., the distance covered being about 115 miles. After a delay of nearly a week, due to unfavorable weather, the Boston aviator left Atlantic City, July 10, at 5:04 a. m., and descended at Stemmer's Run, Md., a few miles from Baltimore, at 9:23 a. m., being unable to proceed farther on account of the great heat and humidity. The flight of forty miles to College Park, Md., the military aviation field near Washington, D. C., was completed early on the morning of July 11. The total distance covered was approximately 525 miles.

FROM KEY WEST TO HAVANA.

Jan. 30, 1911, an attempt was made by J. A. D. McCurdy to fly in a Curtiss biplane from Key West to Havana to win a prize of $8,000. All the conditions were favorable and the flight was a success until a point some ten miles from Havana was reached, when something went wrong with the engine and the lubricating oil dropped out. McCurdy was compelled to descend to the water on which the biplane, which was supplied with pontoons, floated until a life boat from one of the accompanying torpedo boat destroyers came to the rescue. Neither man nor machine was injured in the least. The distance traveled was ninety-six miles and the time occupied 2 hours and 8 minutes. It broke the record for over water flights, but it only stood until March 5, when Lieut. Blague covered 140 miles over the Mediterranean sea, between Nice and Gorgona

PARIS TO MADRID.

One of the most sensational aeroplane flights of 1911 was that from Paris, France, to Madrid, Spain, May 21-26. The Petit Parisien offered a prize of $20,000 to the winner of a race between the two capitals and some twenty machines were entered. When the start was made from the Issy-les-Molineux aviation field one of the aeroplanes fell, killing M. Berteaux, minister of war, and seriously wounding Premier Monis. This caused most of the contestants to withdraw and only Pierre Vedrine, M. Gibert and M. Garros started. The first stage was from Paris to Angouleme, the second from Angouleme to San Sebastian and the third from San Sebastian to Madrid. The three airmen succeeded in reaching San Sebastian, but Gibert and Garros failed to clear the mountains in the last stretch and only Vedrine succeeded in reaching Madrid, where he landed at 8:06 o'clock on the morning of May 26. The total distance traversed was 721 miles and Vedrine's official flying time was 37 hours 27 minutes. This, however, included time for repairs and other delays and the actual time in the air was only 12 hours and 18 minutes. While crossing the mountains Vedrine was attacked by a large eagle, and Gibert had the same experience. Vedrine's total winnings were $30,000, and he also received the cross of the Order of Alfonso XII.

PARIS TO ROME.

What was intended to be an aeroplane race from Paris to Turin by way of Rome was started May 28 with twenty-one entries, who were given until June 15 to reach the goal. Prizes aggregating $100,000 were offered. Andre Beaumont and Roland Garros took the lead from the start, most of the other competitors dropping out early in the race. The route was by way of Avignon, Nice, Genoa and Pisa. Beaumont was ahead at Avignon and Nice, but Garros arrived at Genoa first. Beaumont, however, made a fine flight from Alassio to Rome, covering the distance in less than seven hours, including stops in Genoa and Pisa, and arrived in Rome on the afternoon of May 31. Garros arrived the following day, having met with a mishap near Pisa. Frey, a German aviator, reached Rome June 3 and Vidart arrived June 5. Unfavorable weather conditions and injuries received by the men and machines caused all but Herr Frey to abandon the race at this point, and he, after starting for Turin June 13, fell and was seriously injured at Lake Vico. Beaumont won the bulk of the prizes offered.

PARIS TO TOP OF PUY-DE-DOME.

M. Renaux, with M. Senoucque as a passenger, flew from St. Cloud, a suburb of Paris, France, to the summit of Puy-de-Dome, 217 miles distant, March 7, 1911, in a Farman biplane. The start was made at 9.12 a. m.. and in compliance with the conditions which had to be fulfilled in order to win the prize of $20,000 offered by M. Michelin for the first aviator who should accomplish the feat, the Arc de Triomphe in Paris was first circled. Nevers, 132 miles from Paris, was reached at 11:50 a. m., and here a stop of seventeen minutes was made. When Clermont-Ferrand was reached the aviator made a turn about the spires of the cathedral and then flew to the top of the mountain Puy-de-Dome, 4,800 feet above the sea. The time occupied was 5 hours 8 minutes; the rules allowed six hours.

M. HELEN'S LONG FLIGHT.

Saturday, Aug. 26, 1911, M. Helen, a French aviator, contesting for the international Michelin cup, covered 1,126.4 kilometers (700 miles) in 13 hours 47 minutes 19 seconds with only three stops of 24, 28 and 15 minutes for rest. His course was from Betheny to Somme-Vesle (near Mourmelon), France, 102.4 kilometers in length, which he covered eleven times, stopping at the end of each third lap for a short rest.

1,000 MILE CIRCUIT RACE.

Lieut. Conneau, whose racing name is Andre Beaumont, won a 1,000 mile international circuit aviation race beginning and ending at Vincennes, near Paris. It was in all respects one of the most remarkable contests in the history of air racing. The course took the flyers from Paris across Belgium, Holland, over the English channel to London, and back to Paris. Fifty aeroplanists started June 18 and nine arrived at the goal July 7. Three of the competitors were killed just as the race began and others met with more or less serious mishaps. The principal stops were at Liege and Brussels, Belgium; Utrecht, Holland; Calais and Roubaix, France, and Dover and Hendon (near London), England. The English channel was crossed July 3 from Calais to Dover by no less than eleven of the airmen. The return trip from Dover to Calais was made July 6, both crossings being made easily and without mishap. Prizes aggregating about $100,000 were given, of which Beaumont won $26,500. Garros was second in the race and Vidart third. The flying time for the entire circuit of the three leaders was: Beaumont, 58:36:45; Garros, 62:18:34; Vidart, 73:32:00.

UNITED KINGDOM CIRCUIT.

Lieut. Conneau, flying under the name of Andre Beaumont, won a prize of $50,000 offered by the London Daily Mail to the winner of an aviation race of 1,010 miles around the united kingdom. The course was from Brooklands to Edinburgh, Stirling, Glasgow, Manchester, Exeter, Brighton and back to Brooklands, with a number of intermediate stopping places or controlling stations. Neither machines nor parts of machines could be changed in the course of the contest. The start was made July 22 and the race was finished July 26. Conneau's flying time for the whole distance was 22:28:18.

Pierre Vedrines was second in 23:38:05. Both machines were intact, no changes of any kind having been made by their pilots. There were nineteen actual starters in the race, but most of them gave up before flying many miles.

GERMAN CIRCUIT RACE.

One of the most important aviation events of the year in Germany was a circuit race of about 1,140 miles, the route taking the contestants from Johannisthal, near Berlin, to Magdeburg, Kiel, Cologne, Hanover and back to Johannisthal. Prizes aggregating $25,000 were offered. Each aviator was required to carry a passenger over at least a part of the route. The start was made June 11 and the three chief prize winners finished July 10. Benno Koenig took first prize for the greatest mileage, Hans Volmueller took second and Bruno Buechner third. Koenig's record was 1,164 miles, the extra mileage being earned by passenger carrying.

CHICAGO AVIATION MEET.

Grant park, Chicago, was the scene of a highly successful international aviation meet Aug. 12-20, 1911. Financially it resulted in a deficit of about $50,000, but the flights were thrilling, many new records were made and the attendance enormous. A large proportion of the seats were free and the opportunities for witnessing the feats of the airmen from the adjoining buildings and streets were almost unlimited. It was estimated that the average daily attendance was at least 250,000. The flights were held under the auspices of the Aero Club of Illinois and were managed by a committee of the International Aviation Meet association, of which James E. Plew was president, Frank F. Wentworth secretary and Bernard J. Mullaney general manager. Thirty-eight well known aviators, representing America, France, England, Ireland and Poland, and flying with the leading types of biplanes and monoplanes were entered, and all but eight or ten took an active part in the meet. The prizes offered aggregated $80,000 and the aviators were guaranteed a minimum of $2 per minute for time consumed in actual flying. The flying hours each day were from 3:30 to 7 p. m.

The meet was marred by two fatal accidents, both occurring on the afternoon of Aug. 15. William R. Badger of Pittsburgh, in a Baldwin biplane, was descending swiftly when his machine collapsed and came to the ground in the sunken arena of Grant park. The aviator was hit by the engine and died within half an hour after he had been brought to a hospital. St. Croix Johnstone of Chicago, in a Moisant monoplane, fell into Lake Michigan about a mile from shore and was killed. Whether death was caused by a blow from the engine or from drowning could not be positively determined. Two other aviators fell into the lake, but were rescued. There were several minor mishaps which were attended by damage to machines only.

One of the interesting features of the meeting was the arrival Aug. 14 of Harry N. Atwood of Boston after having flown from St. Louis in one day, and his departure Aug. 15 for New York city, on the longest biplane journey attempted up to that time.

FIRST WATER AEROPLANE.

Jan. 26, 1911, for the first time in the history of aviation an aeroplane rose from the surface of the water, made a flight in the air and, returning to the starting point, alighted on the water as easily as a gull. This feat was accomplished by Glenn H. Curtiss on San Diego bay, California. Equipped with hydroplanes and a new arrangement of front surfaces, the aeroplane sailed along the surface of the water at a forty mile clip for a quarter of a mile, then rose to a height of fifty feet, remained in the air for 1 minute and 22 seconds and alighted with perfect ease. The feat was repeated a second time with even greater success.

FLIGHT OVER NIAGARA FALLS.

Lincoln Beachey, a California aviator, flew across Niagara falls in a biplane June 27, 1911, ending the flight on the Canadian side after he had swooped under the arches of the upper steel bridge and had flown down the gorge almost as far as the whirlpool. The start was made from a baseball field on the American side and after rising to a height of 2,000 feet the aviator made a number of sweeping circles downward until he was only about 200 feet above the Horseshoe fall. Then dropping still farther he dipped under the arch of the bridge and flew down the river above the rapids. The daring feat was witnessed by 150,000 persons.

RECORD FOR ALTITUDE.

The record for height reached by aeroplane was broken a number of times in 1911. Up to Nov. 7 the greatest altitude ever reached by a heavier-than-air machine was 13,943 feet. The man who made this record was Roland G. Garros, a French aviator, and the place was Parame, France. The American record is held (Nov. 7, 1911,) by Lincoln Beachey, who on Aug. 20, at the Chicago aviation meet, attained a height of 11,642 feet. Other aviators making notable altitude records include the following:

M. Legagneaux, Pau, France, Dec. 9, 1910, 10,499 feet.

Arch Hoxsey, Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 26, 1910, 11,474 feet (unofficial).

Capt. Felix, Etampes, France, Aug. 5, 1911, 11,330 feet.

DURATION RECORD.

Sept. 2, 1911, G. Fournay at Buc, France, flying a Farman biplane, remained in the air continuously for eleven hours one minute, covering a distance of 720 kilometers, or about 450 miles.

INTERNATIONAL AVIATION CUP.

Charles T. Weymaan, American, won the international aviation cup, at Eastchurch, England, July 1, covering 93.2 miles in 1:11:34⅘. His speed approximated 78 miles an hour. Winners of cup to date.

1909—Glenn H. Curtiss.
1910—Claude Grahame-White.
1911—Charles T. Weymann.

WINNERS OF MICHELIN CUP.

1908—Wilbur Wright, 77 miles in 2:20:23.
1909—Henry Farman, 126 miles in 4:15:00.
1910—Maurice Tabuteau, 367 miles in 7:45:00.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Cromwell Dixon, 19 years of age, crossed the Rocky mountain divide between Helena and Blossburg, Mont., Sept. 30, 1911. The highest altitude above sea level reached by him was 7,100 feet. Dixon was the first to cross the continental divide in an aeroplane. He was killed a few days later by a fall at Spokane, Wash.

James J. Ward left New York, N. Y., Sept. 13, 1911, to fly to San Francisco, Cal., in an attempt to win a prize of $50,000 for the first aviator crossing the continent by aeroplane before a certain date. He met with several accidents to his machine and only got as far as Hornell, N. Y., where he gave up the race Sept. 22. The total distance covered was about 300 miles. In an effort to win the same prize Robert F. Fowler left San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 11, but he also met with mishaps and besides found that his machine was too light to carry him over the mountains. He gave up the attempt at Colfax, Cal.

Hugh Robinson undertook to fly along the Mississippi from Minneapolis to New Orleans, but financial obstacles compelled him to quit when he reached Rock Island, Ill., Oct. 23. He began the trip Oct. 17, using a hydro-aeroplane.

The first United States mail ever transported by aeroplane was carried Sept. 23, 1911, from the aviation field on Nassau boulevard, Long Island, to Garden City, a distance of five miles, by Earle L. Ovington in a Bleriot machine.

FRENCH MINISTER OF WAR KILLED.

One of the worst accidents in the history of aviation took place at Issy-les-Molineux, a suburb of Paris, France, Sunday, May 21, 1911. A crowd of 200,000 persons, including several members of the cabinet, had gathered to witness the start of an aeroplane race from Paris to Madrid. A monoplane, piloted by M. Train, had just left the ground when it got out of control and plunged into a group of spectators. Henry Maurice Berteaux, minister of war, was killed instantly, his body being badly mangled by the swiftly revolving propeller blades. Antoine E. E. Monis, premier and minister of the interior, was buried under the wreckage of the machine and received a number of serious injuries. Antoine Monis, his son, and Henri Deutsch de la Mourthe, a patron of aeronautics, were also injured. The aviator and a passenger with him escaped injury. M. Train claimed that his motor gave out just as he was trying to avoid a body of cavalry galloping across the field, and the machine fell.

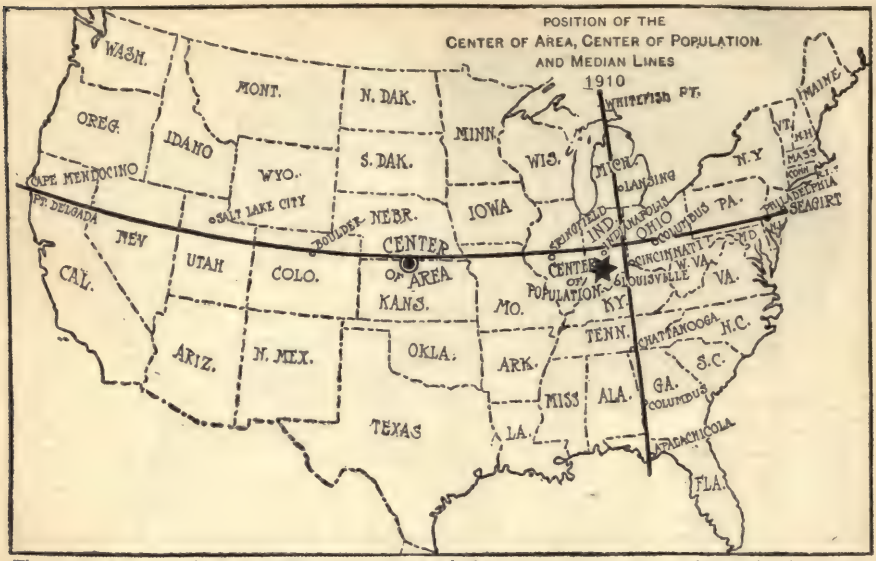
CENTER OF POPULATION AND MEDIAN LINES

[From bulletin of the bureau of the census, 1911.]



The center of population, according to the bureau of the census, may be said to represent the center of the gravity of the population. If the surface of the United States be considered as a rigid plane without weight, capable of sustaining the population distributed thereon, individuals being assumed to be of equal weight, and each, therefore, to exert a pressure on any supporting pivotal point directly proportional to his distance from the point, the pivotal point on which the plane balances would, of course, be its center of gravity, and this is the point referred to by the term "center of population" as used by the census bureau in its reports.

The median point, which may be described as the numerical center of population, is in no sense a center of gravity. In determining the median point distance is not taken into account, and the location of the units of population is considered only in relation to the intersecting median lines—as being north or south of the median parallel and east and west of the meridian.

The position of the center of population and its movement during each decade since 1790 is shown in the following table:

MEDIAN LINES.

In connection with the definition of the median point another method of presenting facts with regard to the geographical distribution of the population has been noted, involving the location of median lines. A parallel of latitude is determined which evenly divides the population so that the population north of that parallel is the same as that south. Similarly, a meridian of longitude is determined which divides the population evenly as between east and west. In calculating these median lines it is necessary, in the case of the square degrees of latitude and longitude which are traversed by the lines themselves, to assume that the population is evenly distributed through these square degrees or to make an estimated adjustment where this is obviously not the case.

The eastern terminus of the median parallel, according to the census of 1910, is on the New Jersey coast near Seagirt. In its course west this line passes through central New Jersey, leaving the state near Burlington and entering Pennsylvania a few miles north of Philadelphia, thence passing through Norristown and continuing through southern Pennsylvania and across the northern extremity of West Virginia, leaving the latter state at a point a few miles north of Wheeling. It nearly bisects Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, crossing about ten miles north of Columbus, O.; twenty-five miles north of Indianapolis, Ind., and about twenty miles north of Springfield, Ill. Through Missouri it runs about thirty miles south of the Iowa and Missouri line, thence passing through Nebraska about ten miles north of its southern boundary, and across the northern part of Colorado, passing about five miles north of Boulder City. Its location in Utah is about forty-five miles south of Salt Lake City. There are no large towns near its course across the northern part of Nevada and California. The western terminus of the median parallel is on the Pacific coast, in Humboldt county, California, about five miles north of Point Delgada and twenty miles south of Cape Mendocino, the point of continental United States extending farthest west.

The median meridian starts at Whitefish point, on the northern peninsula of Michigan, near the eastern end of Lake Superior, thence passing south about twenty-five miles west of Lansing and through Indiana about ten miles west of the Indiana-Ohio boundary and twenty-five miles west of Cincinnati. South of the Ohio river it bisects Kentucky, crosses eastern Tennessee and leaves that state twenty miles east of Chattanooga. Through Georgia it passes close to the Georgia-Alabama line, about two miles west of Columbus, Ga., leaving the state near the intersection of the Alabama, Georgia and Florida boundary lines. It then crosses the northwestern part of Florida and terminates in the Gulf of Mexico at the city of Apalachicola. The following table shows the movement of the median lines from 1880 to 1910, inclusive:

CONSERVATION OF THE NATIONAL RESOURCES.

NATIONAL CONSERVATION ASSOCIATION.

The National Conservation association, with headquarters in the Colorado building, Washington, D. C., is now the organized head of the conservation movement in the United States. The association came into existence because of an urgent need for an organization open to every man and woman who stood for conservation, which would give them immediate opportunity for united and effective work.

On July 29, 1909, the first step was taken. A group of the men who had led in the fight for conservation met and organized the National Conservation association. Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard university, was made president of the association. Soon after Gifford Pinchot was removed from the government service by President Taft, Dr. Eliot presented his resignation and nominated Mr. Pinchot as his successor. Mr. Pinchot's election as president of the National Conservation association followed, the honorary presidency being accepted by Dr. Eliot.

In a booklet explaining the objects of the association is the following:

"The National Conservation association is fighting for the prompt and orderly development of our natural resources, for the welfare of ourselves and our children, and for the rights of the plain people. The association is bound neither by political considerations nor official connections. It is free to speak the whole truth.

"That conservation means the use of our natural resources for the benefit of us all and not merely for the profit of a few is already household knowledge. The task which the National Conservation association has set itself is to get this principle put into practical effect."

The association is maintained by annual dues from membership, which is divided into the following classes:

Members	$2.00
Active members	5.00
Contributing members	25.00
Patrons	100.00
Life membership	1,000.00

The organization of the National Conservation association is as follows:

Gifford Pinchot, president, Washington, D. C.

Charles W. Eliot, honorary president, Cambridge, Mass.

Overton W. Price, vice-president and treasurer, Washington, D. C.; Thomas R. Shipp, secretary, Washington, D. C.; James R. Garfield, Cleveland, O., and Amos E. R. Pinchot, New York, N. Y., counsel.

NATIONAL CONSERVATION CONGRESS.

The third national conservation congress was held in Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 26-27, 1911. Addresses were made by Dr. Henry Wallace, Dr. Warren H. Wilson, Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, Secretary of the Interior Walter L. Fisher, William J. Bryan and others. Among the resolutions adopted was one recommending the bringing together as a department of health the various human health activities of the United States government as a co-ordinate branch of its administrative work. Another resolution recommended the early opening of the coal lands and other resources of Alaska on a leasing system, national ownership to be retained pending the creation of states within its area.

Officers for 1911-1912: President, J. B. White, Kansas City, Mo.; secretary, Thomas R. Shipp, Colorado building, Washington, D. C.; treasurer, D. Austin Latshaw, Kansas City, Mo.; recording secretary, James C. Gape, Clarks, La.

The distances of visibility given in the above table are those from which an object may be seen by an observer whose eye is at the lake level; in practice, therefore, it is necessary to add to these a distance of visibility corresponding to the height of the observer's eye above lake level.

THE UNITED STATES CENSUS BUREAU.

The bureau of the census in the department of commerce and labor, Washington, D. C., is charged with the duty of taking the periodical censuses of the United States and of collecting such special statistics as are required by congress, including statistics of births and deaths in registration areas, statistics of the cotton production of the country as returned by the ginners, the consumption of cotton and statistics of cities having 30,000 or more inhabitants.

The act passed at the extra session of the 61st congress and approved July 2, 1909, for the taking of the thirteenth and subsequent censuses provided that a census should be taken of the population, agriculture, manufactures and mines and quarries of the United States in 1910 and every ten years thereafter, and that it should include each state and territory on the mainland, the District of Columbia, Alaska, Hawaii and Porto Rico. An assistant director, a geographer, a chief statistician and other officers and clerks in addition to the regular force in the census office were provided for.

FLOOD AT BLACK RIVER FALLS, WIS.

Black River Falls, Wis., a city of about 2,000 inhabitants, was visited by a disastrous flood Oct. 6 and 7, 1911. The Black river, on the banks of which the town stands, overflowed its banks after a period of heavy rains and washed away business houses and residences. Most of the structures stood on sandy foundations and were undermined, causing them to topple over and disappear in the rushing waters. Practically all of the inhabitants had to pass a night and a day without shelter and almost without food, but fortunately no lives were lost. The damage to property was estimated at $1,200,000.

FAMINE IN CHINA.

Famine conditions prevailed in the Anhui and Hupeh provinces of China in the spring and summer of 1911. The harvests in the fall of 1910 were almost complete failures on account of heavy rains and floods and before the winter was over the greater part of the population was on the verge of starvation. Missionaries and local officials did what they could to alleviate the suffering, distributing supplies of flour and other articles received from America and Japan, but thousands of the people had to subsist on roots and grasses. At Shayank in Hupeh province twenty-one persons were trampled to death while the missionaries were trying to distribute food. The Rev. E. C. Lebenstine, who made a trip of inspection through the famine district in Anhui province, estimated that 2,500,000 persons were practically starving. How many died from want was not reported, but the number was thought to be very large.

DESTRUCTION OF BATTLE SHIP LIBERTE.

Fire followed by a series of explosions destroyed the first class French battle ship Liberte in the harbor of Toulon, France, Sept. 25, 1911, with a loss of 235 lives. The fire was discovered at 5 o'clock in the morning and at first was not thought to be serious, but it made rapid progress and soon penetrated to the ammunition magazines, which had not been flooded. Several terrific explosions occurred which opened up fissures in the armor and framework of the vessel, which soon sank. The Liberte carried a crew of 793 officers and men, and of these many were killed in their berths. Besides the 235 who were lost, eighty-eight were wounded. The cost of the vessel was about $7,000,000.

NOTE—Owing to imperfect data the above figures are only approximately correct, but being based on the same method of enumeration they are of some value for comparative purposes. The true annual birth rate for the whole of the United States, as shown by the natural increase of population between 1890 and 1900, is within 2 per cent either way of 35.1 per 1,000 of mean population.

DEATHS AND BIRTHS BY DIVISIONS OF TIME.

Assuming that the total population of the world is 1,600,000,000 and the average annual death rate 20 per 1,000 of population, the total number of deaths in a year is about 32,000,000. This is at the rate of 87,671 per day, 3,653 per hour, 61 per minute and 1 per second.

As the population of the world increases by about 7,000,000 per year, the total births must be that number in excess of the deaths, or about 39,000,000. This is at the rate of 106,849 births per day, 4,452 per hour, 74 per minute and 1.2 per second.

Assuming that the population of the United States is 87,000,000 and the death rate 16 per 1,000, the total number of deaths in a year is 1,392,000. This is at the rate of 3,814 per day, 159 per hour and 2.6 per minute. With a birth rate of 34 per 1,000, the total number of births in a year in the United States will approximate 2,958,000, or at the rate of 8,104 per day, 338 per hour and 5.6 per minute.

BATTLE SHIP MAINE SUNK BY A MINE.

The wreck of the battle ship Maine, sunk in the harbor of Havana, Cuba, on the night of Feb. 15, 1908, was almost completely uncovered in 1911, though lack of a sufficient appropriation hampered the work. A large cofferdam was built around the vessel and the water pumped out gradually. Much of the hull was sunk deep in the mud and this was cleared away with considerable difficulty. The double bottom of the ship with parts of the keel was found standing in an upright position and some twenty-eight feet higher than the natural position. Experts expressed the belief that such a tearing of the vessel could not have been produced by an interior explosion, but that some unusually large mine must have been used. Rear-Admiral W. L. Capps, formerly constructor of the navy, submitted a report to the secretary of the navy, which tended to confirm the opinion of the court of inquiry that the battle ship was destroyed by an external explosion.

The remains of sixteen of the victims of the disaster were found in the wreckage, but could not be identified.

THE JOHN R. WALSH CASE.

John R. Walsh, Chicago banker, was released on parole from the Leavenworth federal penitentiary Oct. 14, 1911, after serving one year eight months and twenty-six days of the five-year sentence which he was given by Judge Albert B. Anderson in the United States District court in Chicago, March 13, 1908. He began serving his term Jan. 19, 1910, and died Oct. 23, 1911, a few days after his return home on parole. The Chicago National bank, of which he was president, was closed Dec. 16, 1905, and it was charged that its failure was caused by Mr. Walsh's illegal transference of $2,000,000 to his railroad enterprises.

STEPHENSON INVESTIGATION.

Aug. 15, 1911, the United States senate adopted the following resolution reported from the committee on privileges and elections:

"That the senate committee on privileges and elections, or any subcommittee thereof, be authorized and directed to investigate certain charges preferred by the legislature of Wisconsin against Isaac Stephenson, a senator of the United States from the state of Wisconsin, and to report to the senate whether in the election of said Isaac Stephenson as a senator of the United States from the said state of Wisconsin there were used or employed corrupt methods or practices; that said committee or subcommittee be authorized to sit during the recess of the senate, to hold its session at such place or places as it shall deem most convenient for the purposes of the investigation, to employ stenographers, to send for persons and papers and to administer oaths; and that the expenses of the inquiry shall be paid from the contingent fund of the senate upon vouchers to be approved by the chairman of the committee or chairman of the subcommittee."

Senators Heyburn, Sutherland, Pomerene, Bradley and Paynter were appointed a special committee to conduct the investigation, which began in Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 2 and continued until Nov. 1. Senator Stephenson testified that he had spent $107,793 in the primary campaign of 1908 to secure the nomination. He said he had not handled the money himself, but had given most of it to his campaign manager, E. A. Edmonds, to use as he saw fit. He denied that any of the money had been corruptly used to secure his nomination. Mr. Edmonds declared that the money was spent legitimately for brass bands, lithographs, buttons, advertising and other customary campaign expenses. No detailed accounts were kept. State Senator John J. Blaine, the senator's principal accuser, admitted on the stand that he had relied chiefly upon newspaper reports, political speeches and rumors in formulating his charges.

UNITED STATES POSTAL SAVINGS LAW.

The act of congress, approved June 25, 1910, authorizes the establishment of postal savings depository offices and creates a board of trustees, consisting of the postmaster-general, the secretary of the treasury and the attorney-general, severally, acting ex officio, with power to designate such post-offices as it may select to be postal savings depository offices. This board has control and supervision of all postal savings offices and of the funds deposited in them, and has authority to make all necessary regulations for the receipt, custody, deposit, investment and repayment of such funds.

Any person, 10 years of age or over, may open an account, in his or her own name, in any postal savings depository, but no person can have more than one such account in his or her own right. Deposit accounts may be opened, first, by the deposit of $1 or a larger amount in multiples thereof; second, by purchasing for 10 cents a postal savings card and attaching thereto 10 cent postal saving stamps and depositing the card and the stamps in the amount of $1, or any multiple thereof. Additional deposits may be made in cash in amounts of $1 or multiples thereof, or by card and 10 cent stamps in corresponding amounts, but no person is permitted to deposit more than $100 in any calendar month, and the balance to the credit of any person can never exceed $500.

Interest at the rate of 2 per cent per annum is allowed on all deposits, and any person may withdraw the whole or any part of his or her deposit, with accrued interest, upon demand and under such rules as the board of trustees prescribe.

Of the postal savings bank fund, 5 per cent is deposited as a reserve with the treasurer of the United States. The remaining funds are deposited in national or state banks at a rate of interest of not less than 2½ per cent.

The faith of the United States is pledged to the payment of any deposit made in postal savings bank depository offices.

The banks were a success from the start. During the period from Jan. 3 to Feb. 25, 1911, the number of accounts opened in the forty-eight depositories first established was 3,923 and the net amount on deposit was $138,869. Many additional postal savings banks were established in the course of the year and the pressure of work incident to the extension of the system delayed the compilation of statistics for the fiscal year 1911, so that the figures were not available in time for publication in this edition of The Daily News Almanac and Year-Book.

The first postal bank in Chicago was opened in the main office Aug. 1. The number of depositors on the first day was 461 and the total amount deposited $9,421. Postal banks were also opened Aug. 1 in New York, Boston and St. Louis.

WILLIAM LORIMER'S ELECTION AS UNITED STATES SENATOR.

The right of William Lorimer, republican, of Chicago, to hold his seat in the United States senate, to which he was elected May 26, 1909, by a combination of democrats and republicans in the Illinois legislature, was challenged in the upper house of congress Jan. 9, 1911. Two resolutions were introduced, both declaring his election illegal. One, presented by Senator Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana, was as follows:

"Resolved, That William Lorimer was not duly and legally elected to a seat in the senate of the United States by the legislature of Illinois."

The other, which was introduced by Senator Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma, was as follows:

"Resolved, That the so-called election of William Lorimer on May 26, 1909, by the legislature of the state of Illinois was illegal and void."

Senator Beveridge, as a member of the committee on privileges and elections submitted a report dissenting from the views of the majority of the committee, which, in December, 1910, had declared that the charges of bribery in connection with Mr. Lorimer's election were not sustained. [See The Daily News Almanac and Year-Book for 1911, page 404.] Senator Beveridge contended that if only one case of bribery had been established it invalidated the whole election. "The testimony is overwhelming," he declared, "not only that four members of the general assembly were bribed, but that three of their fellow membefs paid them their money. But these seven votes were not all of the tainted votes cast in this putrid transaction. The testimony shows that at least three additional corrupt votes were cast—those of Clark, Shepard and Luke."

In the course of the long and acrimonious debate which followed and lasted until March 1 speeches against the legality of Mr. Lorimer's election were made by Senators Root, Borah, Crawford, Cummins and others, while among those championing the Illinois Senator's cause most ardently were Senators Bailey, Burrows, Paynter and Heyburn. Mr. Lorimer made a lengthy speech in his own defense, alleging that he was elected in part through his personal popularity among democrats. Senator Cullom spoke in defense of the honor of Illinois generally, though he said nothing about the case pending before the senate. The final vote was taken March 1 and resulted in the defeat of the Beveridge resolution by forty-six nays to forty yeas, as follows:

SENATE'S ACTION RESENTED.

The action of the senate in affirming the legality of Mr. Lorimer's election was followed immediately by criticism and protest in various parts of the country. March 2 the Missouri senate adopted a resolution commending Senators Stone and Warner for voting against Lorimer. March 4 the California senate rebuked Senators Flint and Perkins for "humiliating" the nation by voting for William Lorimer. March 10 the Wisconsin assembly adopted a resolution deploring the action of the United States senate in refusing to unseat Lorimer, commending Senator LaFollette for voting against him and censuring Senator Stephenson for voting for him. The senate concurred in the resolution April 11. Similar action was taken or attempted in Kansas, Connecticut, New Hampshire and Rhode Island.

Ministers in many places, collectively or individually, condemned the action of the senate.

In Illinois the citizens of many towns united in showing their disapproval of the manner of Lorimer's election by holding mass meetings and passing resolutions denouncing the action of the senate and demanding the resignation of both Senators Lorimer and Cullom. Such meetings were held in Rockford, March 5; in Elgin, Lincoln, Lake Forest and Galena, March 7; in Charleston, March 9, and in Hoopeston, March 11. Similar action was taken at public meetings or by representative associations in numerous other places in the state.

LEGISLATIVE INVESTIGATION.

In the Illinois state senate a committee, of which Douglas W. Helm of Metropolis was made chairman, was appointed Jan. 17, 1911, to inquire into corruption in the 46th general assembly. It began taking testimony March 28, but nothing new was developed until H. H. Kohlsaat, editor of the Chicago Record-Herald, was called to the stand March 29. Mr. Kohlsaat testified that a friend had told him in confidence that a fund of $100,000 had been raised to bring about the election of Lorimer as United States senator. The name of this friend he declined to give to the committee. However, the man, who was Clarence S. Funk, general manager of the International Harvester company, voluntarily released Mr. Kohlsaat from the pledge of secrecy and appeared before the committee in Springfield April 5. The substance of his story was as follows: Shortly after Lorimer's election in May, 1909, the witness met Edward Hines, the lumberman, at the Union League club in Chicago.

"He (Hines) said that I was just the fellow he had been looking for and trying to see," continued Mr. Funk, "and he said he wanted to talk to me a minute. We went away and sat down on one of the leather couches at the side of the room. Without any preliminaries and quite as a matter of course, he said: 'Well, we put Lorimer over down there at Springfield, but it cost us about $100,000 to do it.' He went on to say that they had had to act quickly when the time came, that they had no chance to consult anybody beforehand, and I think his words were these: 'We had to act quickly when the time came, so we put up the money.'

"He (Hines) said: 'Now we are seeing some of our friends so as to get it fixed up.' We had some discussion back and forth and finally I asked him how much he (Hines) was getting from his different friends and he said: 'Well, of course, we can only go to a few big people, and if about ten of us will put up $10,000 apiece that will clean it up.' Edward Tilden, connected with the stockyards in Chicago, is the man to whom I was told to send the money."

Mr. Funk said he had promptly declined to give the money asked for and had informed Cyrus H. McCormick, president, and Edgar A. Bancroft, general counsel of the International Harvester company, of the occurrence. He added that shortly after an editorial had appeared in the Record-

Herald (Feb. 15, 1911) referring to the $100,000 fund, Mr. Hines had called on him for the purpose of "refreshing his recollection" about the Union League club interview. Mr. Hines said no mention had been made of the use of money in connection with the Lorimer case. Mr. Funk said he was unable to "refresh" his memory in that way.

April 20 William Burgess of Duluth, Minn., appeared before the committee and testified that a few days after Mr. Lorimer had been exculpated by the United States senate he had had a conversation, on a train between Duluth and Virginia, Minn., with C. F. Wiehe, secretary and director of the Edward Hines Lumber company. "Wiehe," continued the witness, "said Lorimer had not spent a dollar of his own money, but that a jack pot was raised for his election. Wiehe added: 'I know what I am talking about, for I subscribed $10,000 myself.'"

Wirt H. Cook, also of Duluth and a lumberman, formerly associated with Mr. Hines, testified April 26 that shortly before the senatorial election in May, 1909, he had a talk in the Grand Pacific hotel, Chicago, with Mr. Hines in which the latter said it had been all fixed up to elect Lorimer senator, as he had agreed to "stand pat" on the lumber duty. Mr. Cook further testified that he and one William O'Brien of St. Paul, Minn., met Mr. Hines by appointment in the latter part of May in the same hotel and that while they were together Mr. Hines called up Springfield, Ill., by long distance telephone and talked with a man whom he addressed as "governor." He said, according to the witness: "Is this you, governor. Well, I just left President Taft and Senator Aldrich last night in Washington. Now, they tell me that under no consideration shall Hopkins be returned to the senate. Now, I will be down on the next train. Don't leave anything undone. I will be down prepared to furnish all the money that is required." The witness thought Mr. Wiehe was present in the room when this telephone conversation took place.

Mr. Cook also testified that about a year later, in May or June, 1910, when the grand jury was in session in Chicago investigating the legislative scandal, C. F. Wiehe came to his room in the hotel along about midnight and asked him and O'Brien, who was with him again, to get out of town at once or the grand jury would summon them. Wiehe said that Mr. Hines had called him up and asked him to get the witness and O'Brien out of the city.

Mr. Wiehe, on being called before the committee, denied the alleged conversation with Mr. Burgess. He admitted he had been present in the hotel room when Mr. Hines had his telephone conversation with the "governor" in Springfield, but had heard nothing about the use of money. He further admitted that he had paid a midnight visit at the request of Hines to the hotel to get Cook and O'Brien out of town. Hines, he said, did not want his reference to Aldrich and Taft to become known.

In pursuance of the information obtained from Mr. Funk, the committee asked Edward Tilden to appear before the committee with certain books and documents that might throw light upon the alleged Lorimer fund. George M. Benedict and William C. Cummings were asked to produce certain bank accounts kept by Mr. Tilden at the time the fund was supposed to have been collected. These men refused to appear or to produce the documentary proofs sought, whereupon the committee ordered their arrest. Warrants were served upon them, but they were immediately released upon writs of habeas corpus issued by Judge Adelor Petit of the Circuit court of Cook county, who, after a hearing, denied the right of the senate or a committee thereof to require the attendance of these witnesses or the production of the proof demanded. In effect, Judge Petit held that the committee had no power or authority to take proof or to subpœna witnesses because of the fact that the scope of the inquiry under the resolution creating the committee included not only members of the senate but of the house as well, the senate thereby seeking to embark upon an inquiry over which it had no jurisdiction.

Finding its further progress blocked the committee concluded its examination of witnesses and May 17 made a report to the senate, reciting the foregoing and other facts. The essence of its finding was expressed in the following words:

"Your committee has reached the conclusion that the election of William Lorimer before the last general assembly would not have occurred had it not been for bribery and corruption."

May 18 the following resolutions were adopted by the senate by a vote of thirty-nine to ten:

"Whereas, under senate resolution number 17 a committee was appointed to investigate charges of corruption and official misconduct against members of this senate, and

"Whereas, said committee has reported the result of its investigation to this senate, from which it appears that there were important and material witnesses without the state of Illinois whose attendance it could not legally compel and which witnesses refused voluntarily to appear, and

"Whereas, said committee was seriously impeded in the performance of its duties by what we believe to be the unwarranted action of a certain judge, and

"Whereas, it appears from the report of said committee that, despite its inability to compel the attendance of such foreign witnesses and the adverse action of said judge, sufficient evidence was procured to show that without bribery and corruption, and by reason of the failure of certain senators and representatives during the different roll calls to carry out the will of the people, as expressed at the polls, in the choice of a United States senator, which action we deem most reprehensible, and which should be condemned, and which we hereby condemn, the election of William Lorimer to the United States senate would not have occurred.

"Resolved, That it is the opinion of this senate, based upon the report and findings of the said committee, that the election of William Lorimer to a seat in the United States senate was brought about by bribery and corruption, and

"Resolved, That the gravity of the situation, involving as it does the integrity and good name of this state and the welfare of the nation, demands a further investigation and determination of this matter by a body possessing broader jurisdiction and greater powers than does this senate, and be it further

"Resolved, That the secretary of this senate be and he is hereby authorized and directed to transmit to the senate of the United States a copy of the evidence taken by the said committee, together with the report and findings of that committee and a copy of this resolution, for such action as the senate of the United States may deem proper.

CASE REOPENED IN UNITED STATES SENATE.

Senator Robert M. LaFollette of Wisconsin reopened the Lorimer election case in the United States senate April 6 by introducing a resolution providing for the appointment of a special committee to make a new investigation of the whole matter. This resolution, after citing the fact that the Illinois senate had undertaken a new inquiry from which it appeared that witnesses who were not called by the United States senate committee had appeared and given important testimony tending to show that $100,000 was corruptly expended to secure the election of William Lorimer to the United States senate, provided for the appointment of Senators John D. Works, Charles E. Townsend, George P. McLean, John W. Kern and Atlee Pomerene as a special committee to investigate and report to the senate whether in the election of William Lorimer there were used corrupt methods and practices.

Senator LaFollette supported his resolution with a long argument, but June 1, by a vote of forty-eight to twenty, the senate adopted a substitute offered by Senator Thomas S. Martin of Virginia. The vote for making a new inquiry was unanimous. The Martin resolution was as follows:

"Whereas, the senate adopted a resolution on June 20, 1910, directing the committee on privileges and elections to investigate the charges relating to the election of William Lorimer to the senate of the United States, and

"Whereas, since the senate voted on the report of that committee it is represented that new material testimony has been discovered in reference to such matter; and

"Whereas, the senate of the state of Illinois on May 18, 1911, adopted a resolution, for the reasons therein stated, requesting the senate of the United States to institute further investigation of the election of William Lorimer to the senate, it is therefore

"Resolved, That the committee on privileges and elections sitting en banc be and are hereby authorized and directed forthwith to investigate whether in the election of William Lorimer as a senator of the United States from the state of Illinois there were used and employed corrupt methods and practices; that said committee be authorized to sit during the sessions of the senate and during any recess of the senate or of congress; to hold sessions at such place or places as it should deem most convenient for the purposes of the investigation; to employ stenographers, counsel and accountants; to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths, and as early as practicable to report the results of its investigation, including all testimony taken by it, and that the expenses of the inquiry shall be paid from the contingent fund of the senate upon vouchers to be approved by the chairman of the committee.

"The committee is further and specially instructed to inquire fully into and report upon the alleged 'jack pot' fund in its relation to and effect, if any, upon the election of William Lorimer to the senate."

The following subcommittee was named by the committee on privileges and elections June 5 to conduct the investigation: Republicans—Dillingham, Vermont, chairman; Gamble, South Dakota; Jones, Washington; Kenyon, Iowa. Democrats—Johnston, Alabama; Kern, Indiana; Lea, Tennessee; Fletcher, Florida.

The selection of the subcommittee was approved by a resolution in the senate June 7 and that body was clothed with the same powers as those conferred by the Martin resolution upon the committee on privileges and elections.

The examination of witnesses was begun June 20 in room 301 of the senate office building in Washington. Those who appeared before the committee included, among others, Cyrus H. McCormick, president of the International Harvester company; Herman H. Kohlsaat, editor of the Chicago Record-Herald; Clarence S. Funk, general manager of the International Harvester company; Wirt H. Cook, Edward Tilden, Edward Hines, Gov. Charles S. Deneen, Christian F. Wiehe, Nelson W. Aldrich and Boies Penrose. The testimony was substantially the same as that given before the Illinois senate committee, except that additional information was given John H. Marble and John J. Healy were counsel for the committee while Mr. Lorimer was represented by Elbridge Hanecy and William J. Hynes. The committee did not, as at the first hearing, adhere to the strict rules of evidence, but permitted great latitude in the investigation. The hearing continued in Washington until Aug. 9, when a recess was taken until Oct. 10. The committee then met in the federal building in Chicago and resumed the examination of witnesses. It adjourned Nov. 22 to meet in Washington, D. C.

WAR BETWEEN ITALY AND TURKEY.

Italy declared war upon Turkey Sept. 29, 1911. Its reasons for this step were given in an ultimatum sent by Sig. di San Giuliani, the foreign minister, to the government in Constantinople Sept. 26. This was as follows:

"Throughout a long series of years the Italian government has never ceased to represent to the porte the absolute necessity that the state of disorder and neglect in which Tripoli and Cyrenaica are left by Turkey should come to an end, and that these regions should be allowed to enjoy the same progress as that attained by other parts of northern Africa. This transformation, which is required by the general exigencies of civilization, constitutes, so far as Italy is concerned, a vital interest of the very first order, by reason of the small distance separating these countries from the coasts of Italy.

"Notwithstanding the attitude maintained by the Italian government, which has always loyally accorded its support to the imperial government on the different political questions of recent times, notwithstanding the moderation and patience displayed by the Italian government hitherto, not only have its views in regard to Tripoli been misunderstood by the imperial government, but, what is more, all enterprises on the part of Italians, in the aforesaid regions, constantly encounter a systematic opposition of the most obstinate and unwarranted kind.

"The imperial government, which has thus up to now displayed constant hostility toward all legitimate Italian activity in Tripoli and Cyrenaica, quite recently, at the eleventh hour, proposed to the royal government to come to an understanding, declaring itself disposed to grant any economic concession compatible with the treaties in force and with the higher dignity and interests of Turkey; but the royal government does not now feel itself in a position to enter upon such negotiations, the uselessness of which is demonstrated by past experience, and which, far from constituting a guaranty for the future, could but afford a permanent cause of friction and conflict.

"On the other hand, information received by the royal government from its consular agents in Tripoli and Cyrenaica represents the situation there as extremely dangerous on account of the agitation prevailing against Italian subjects, which is very obviously fomented by officers and other organs of the authorities. This agitation constitutes an imminent danger not only to Italian subjects but also to foreigners of any nationality who, justly perturbed and anxious for their safety, have begun to embark and are leaving Tripoli without delay. The arrival at Tripoli of Ottoman military transports, the serious consequences of the sending of which the royal government had not failed to point out previously to the Ottoman government, cannot but aggravate the situation and impress on the royal government the strict and absolute obligation of providing against the perils resulting therefrom.

"The Italian government, therefore, finding itself forced to think of the guardianship of its dignity and its interests, has decided to proceed to the military occupation of Tripoli and Cyrenaica. This solution is the only one Italy can decide upon, and the royal government expects that the imperial government will in consequence give orders so that it may meet with no opposition from the present Ottoman representatives, and that the measures which will be the necessary consequence may be effected without difficulty. Subsequent agreements would be made between the two governments to settle the definite situation arising therefrom. The royal ambassador in Constantinople has orders to ask for a peremptory reply on this matter from the Ottoman government within twenty-four hours from the presentation of the present document, in default of which the Italian government will be obliged to proceed to the immediate execution of the measures destined to insure the occupation.

"Pray add that the reply of the porté within the aforesaid limit of twenty-four hours must be communicated to us through the intermediary of the Turkish embassy in Rome also.

"SAN GIULIANO."

DECLARATION OF WAR.

The ultimatum was officially delivered to the porte Sept. 28. On the following day the Italian charge in Constantinople handed the following communication to the porte:

"The Italian embassy, carrying out the orders of the king, has the honor to notify you that the delay accorded by the royal government to the porte, with a view to the realization of certain necessary measures, has expired without a satisfactory reply reaching the Italian government. The lack of this reply only confirms the bad will, or want of power, of which the Turkish government and authorities have given such frequent proof, especially with regard to the rights and interests of Italians in Tripoli and Cyrenaica.

"The royal government consequently is obliged itself to safeguard its rights and interests, as well as its honor and dignity, by all means at its disposal. Events which will follow can only be regarded as the necessary consequence of conduct followed so long by the Turkish authorities. The relations of peace and friendship being therefore interrupted between the two countries, Italy considers herself from this moment in a state of war with Turkey.

"I have, therefore, the honor to make known to your highness that passports will be placed at the disposal of the charge d'affaires at Rome, and I beg your highness to hand passports to the representative of the royal government. Ottoman subjects may continue to reside in Italy without fear of an attack upon their persons, property or affairs."

In further explanation of the situation which led to the declaration of war it may be said the differences between the Italians and Turks in Tripoli were of long standing. A large proportion of the 6,000 or 7,000 foreigners in the Turkish vilayet are Italians and these for many years had been subjected to systematic annoyances of the worst kind. Diplomatic protests were of no avail, being answered simply with promises which never were fulfilled. In addition to this, Italy had made no secret of its desire to possess Tripoli in the event that the Ottoman empire should be dissolved.

The European press generally criticised Italy for its sudden action, calling it piracy and robbery, but this opinion was changed in a measure when the facts in the case became better known. Besides, it was pointed out that Austria-Hungary had seized Bosnia-Herzegovina, Germany, France and Spain had invaded Morocco and England had often engaged in similar enterprises, so that Italy could claim that it had plenty of precedents for its course. The efforts of the great powers were immediately directed toward localizing the war and preventing its spread, especially to the Balkan states. In this they were successful, and in spite of Turkish appeals for intervention they maintained a neutral attitude.

Before declaring war Italy had made all preparations, naval and military, for prompt and energetic action, so that no time was lost. It immediately established a blockade on the Tripolitan coast and proceeded to clear the Mediterranean and Adriatic seas of Turkish warships, particularly destroyers, which might do damage to Italian commerce. The blockade was intrusted to a strong fleet under Vice-Admiral Favarelli, while Vice-Admiral the Duke of the Abruzzi had charge of the operations designed to checkmate such naval operations as the Turks might undertake with their few war vessels. Both performed their tasks successfully. On the same afternoon when war was declared the duke of the Abruzzi, with a squadron of topedo boats, attacked some Turkish gunboats and torpedo boats in the harbor of Prevesa and soon put them out of commission. He moved with equal energy at other points, and whatever semblance of Turkish naval power there had been on the Adriatic and Mediterranean speedily disappeared.

The fleet on the Tripolitan coast had a harder task, but performed it with equal success. The city of Tripoli, which was held by a garrison of Turkish soldiers, was called upon to surrender within twenty-four hours. It refused to do so and when the time limit expired at 2 p. m., Oct. 3, twelve Italian war vessels, headed by the flagship Benedetto Brin, began to bombard the forts. The latter returned the fire without effect, the Turkish cannon being antiquated and the ammunition defective. The bombardment continued until the morning of Oct. 5, by which time the forts were in ruins and the garrison had retired into the interior. Twelve Turks were killed and twenty-three wounded by the shell fire. Troops were landed without opposition and the city was taken possession of by Vice-Admiral Borea d'Olmo, who had been appointed governor of Tripoli in advance. Chiefs of the Arab tribes adjacent to the city offered their submission to the Italians.

Within a few days the Italians had occupied the seaports along the coast of Tripoli. These included Benghazi, Derna, Cyrene and Tobruk. The last named place was shelled by the first Italian squadron under Rear-Admiral Aubrey on the morning of Oct. 8, and after a brief resistance by a small Turkish force surrendered.

Meanwhile the mobilization of troops in Italy was quickly effected and an expeditionary force of some 35,000 men organized for the conquest and occupation of the interior of Tripoli. These troops, which were commanded by Gen. Caneva, left Naples and other ports Oct. 5 and on succeeding days. The first detachment, consisting of infantry, cavalry and engineers, landed at Tobruk Oct. 10. The next day a large force landed in Tripoli, where they relieved the marines who had been on duty since the capture of the city.

The Italians were not permitted to retain possession of Tripoli without severe fighting. The Turkish forces, with the aid of hostile Arabs, made constant attacks on the outposts and in some of these engagements many men on both sides were killed or wounded. One of the most serious of these battles occurred Oct. 30, when the Italians were assailed in force by the Turks. At the same time armed Arabs in the city opened fire upon them from the rear, causing many casualties and much confusion. The Italian troops beat off the enemy and summarily shot all the treacherous Arabs within the city on whom they could lay their hands. It was reported that they spared neither women nor children and the affair was described by English correspondents as a massacre. Turkey, in a note addressed to the American secretary of state Nov. 5, called the attention of the government to the alleged atrocities in Tripoli and asked for "prompt and efficacious intervention." The Italian authorities emphatically denied all stories of inhumanity, declaring that only Arabs found with arms in their possession were shot.

Fighting of a more or less serious character also occurred at Derna and Benghazi, the Turks claiming victories.

NEW TUNNEL UNDER THE ALPS.

The Loetschberg railway tunnel through the Bernese Alps was completed in 1911 after five and a half years' work and the expenditure of $20,000,000. It is the third longest in Europe, measuring approximately nine miles. It gives the Simplon Tunnel railway a direct connection with railways which traverse Switzerland from north to south and shortens the route from Milan to Calais by about eighty miles.

FOREST FIRES IN ONTARIO.

Forest fires swept over a large district in the northern part of Ontario, Canada, the second week in July, 1911, causing the loss of more than 100 lives and a large amount of property. The greater part of the casualties occurred at South Porcupine, where many miners were surrounded by flames and perished in the mine shafts where they took refuge. The townships of Langmuir, Eldorado, Shaw, Deloro, Ogden, McArthur and Cripple Creek were swept clean, and the towns of Cochrane, South Porcupine and Pottsville destroyed.

Forest fires also did much damage in July in northern Michigan and in parts of Maine and New Hampshire. The towns of Au Sable and Oscoda in Michigan suffered severely.

PANAMA-PACIFIC EXPOSITION IN SAN FRANCISCO.

The opening of the Panama canal and the 400th anniversary of the discovery of the Pacific ocean will be celebrated by an international exposition in San Francisco, Cal., in 1915. Steps with that end in view were taken in 1910, when a guaranty fund of $17,500,000 was raised. Of this amount $5,000,000 is provided by a special tax levied by the legislature upon all the property in California, an additional $5,000,000 through the issuance of bonds by the city of San Francisco and the balance of $7,500,000 by popular subscriptions. No government aid was asked. New Orleans was also a contender for the honor of holding the canal celebration and a fund of $7,500,000 was authorized to be raised, $6,500,000 through a state tax and $1,000,000 through subscription in New Orleans. The matter came before congress and the following joint resolution was passed by the house Jan. 31 and by the senate Feb. 11, and was signed by the president Feb. 15, 1911:

"Resolved, etc., That whenever it shall be shown to the satisfaction of the president of the United States that a suitable site has been selected, and that the sum of not less than $15,000,000 will be available to enable the Panama-Pacific International Exposition company, a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the state of California for the purpose of inaugurating, carrying forward and holding an exposition at the city and county of San Francisco, Cal., on or about the 1st day of January, 1915, to celebrate the completion and opening of the Panama canal, and also the 400th anniversary of the discovery of the Pacific ocean, the president of the United States be, and he is hereby authorized and respectfully requested, by proclamation or in such manner as he may deem proper, to invite all foreign countries and nations to such proposed exposition, with a request that they participate therein."

Charles G. Moore is president of the exposition company.

PANAMA-CALIFORNIA EXPOSITION IN SAN DIEGO.

Ground was broken July 19, 1911, for the Panama-California exposition which is to be held in San Diego, Cal., during the entire year 1915. The buildings, which are to be of the Spanish-colonial type of architecture and to be known collectively as the Mission City, will be erected on a site of 1,400 acres in Balboa park. The city has raised by subscription $2,500,000 for the promotion of the plan. Following are the chief officers: President, U. S. Grant, Jr.; first vice-president, John D. Spreckels; director-general, Col. D. C. Collier; director of publicity, Joseph W. Sefton, Jr.; secretary, Levi G. Moore.

LOS ANGELES TIMES DYNAMITE CASE.

John J. McNamara, secretary and treasurer of the International Bridge and Structural Ironworkers' union, was arrested in Indianapolis, Ind., April 22, 1911, on the charge of being implicated in the dynamiting of the Los Angeles Times building Oct. 1, 1910. His arrest followed that of Ortie E. McManigal and James B. McNamara in Detroit, Mich., April 12, for the same offense. It was not until April 23, however, that the facts were made known by William J. Burns, head of the Burns Detective agency, who for many months had been investigating not only the Los Angeles Times affair, but many other mysterious explosions in widely separated localities. These in practically all instances occurred where nonunion or open shop labor had been employed in the construction of buildings, bridges and other structures. The same kind of dynamite bombs and the same methods were used as a rule and the conclusion was reached that they were the work of the same men. Before the arrests were made more than 100 lives had been lost and some $3,000,000 worth of property destroyed through the explosions.

For the discovery and apprehension of the men who blew up the Los Angeles Times building, with the loss of twenty-one lives and $500,000 worth of property, rewards aggregating $500,000 were offered. The grand jury of Los Angeles county examined many witnesses and returned indictments against twenty-three persons alleged to have been implicated in the affair. These included one "J. B. Bryce," Harry Kaplan and Matt Schmidt. "Bryce," it was subsequently alleged, was an alias assumed by James B. McNamara, who was supposed to be the man who bought the dynamite from the Giant Powder company in Los Angeles with which the Times building was blown up. McNamara is a brother of John J. McNamara and his home was in Cincinnati, O. He and Ortie E. McManigal, an ironworker in Chicago, were accused of being the "wrecking crew" of the Iron Workers' union. Kaplan and Schmidt, who were said to have assisted them, were classed by the detectives as anarchists. It was further asserted that John J. McNamara furnished the funds for the dynamite and other expenses of the wreckers.

Following clews given, it was reported, by Ortie McManigal, the detectives found materials for the manufacture of bombs in several places. In the room occupied by James B. McNamara and McManigal in Detroit were a number of small alarm clocks, batteries and dynamite. In a barn a mile west of Indianapolis were seventeen sticks of dynamite and two quarts of nitroglycerin. In the basement of the Central Life building, Indianapolis, occupied in part as the headquarters of the Iron Workers' union, were sixty-four sticks of dynamite, 200 feet of fuse, 500 dynamite caps and a dozen small alarm clocks. In a shed in the rear of the home of James McManigal, father of Ortie E. McManigal, in Tiffin, O., were 400 pounds of dynamite. It was also reported that a considerable quantity of electric wire and an electric battery tester were found in the home of Mrs. J. A. McNamara, mother of John J. and James B. McNamara, in Cincinnati, O. A suitcase belonging to J. B. McNamara was seized in the union station at Columbus, O., and was found to contain twine and wrapping paper similar to that used in wrapping up the dynamite found in Indianapolis. Most of the dynamite discovered was reported to have been stolen.

Though the arrest of John J. McNamara was made upon a warrant and requisition papers from the governor of California were honored by Gov. Marshall of Indiana, it was charged by the defendant's friends and the labor leaders in Indianapolis that McNamara had been given no opportunity to resist extradition and that he had been "railroaded" out of the state. Warrants were sworn out charging Detective William J. Burns, Walter Drew, W. J. Ford and Frank Fox with kidnaping. Mr. Drew was attorney for the National Erectors' association, which had been investigating the dynamiting of many structures in which its members were interested. W. J. Ford was assistant district attorney of Los Angeles county and Frank Fox was a chauffeur who had assisted the officers in getting McNamara out of the city. The arrests were made and the men were held in bonds to await the action of the grand jury.

The two McNamaras and McManigal were taken at once to Los Angeles, where they arrived April 26. Great precautions were taken to prevent their escape or rescue by legal or other means while making the journey.

The case came up in court Oct. 11 and James B. McNamara was the first of the defendants to be placed on trial. The chief counsel for the defense was Clarence Darrow of Chicago.

Weeks were spent in efforts to secure a jury to try the case and the necessary number of men had not yet been secured when, on the afternoon of Dec. 1, it was suddenly announced that the two principal defendants, James Boyd McNamara and his brother, John J. McNamara, had decided to plead guilty. They were called into court and both confirmed the announcement. James B. McNamara pleaded guilty to murder in the first degree in having caused the explosion in the Los Angeles Times office. His brother pleaded guilty to having caused the explosion in the Llewellyn iron works. Judge Walter Bordwell, who presided in the case, fixed Dec. 5 as the day on which he would pronounce sentence, and on the date named he fixed the punishment of James B. McNamara at imprisonment for life in St. Quentin prison. To John J. McNamara he gave fifteen years in the same prison.

Prior to being sentenced James B. McNamara made a written statement in which he said that on the night of Sept. 30, 1910, he placed in "ink alley," a portion of the Times building, a suitcase containing sixteen sticks of 80 per cent dynamite, set to explode at 1 o'clock the next morning. It was, he declared, his intention to injure the building and scare the owners, but not to take the life of any one.

The cases against the McNamaras were prosecuted by District Attorney John D. Fredericks. Sensational charges of attempts at jury bribing were made just prior to the entering of pleas of guilty by the defendants.

Between May 31, 1906, and April 5, 1911, sixty-seven dynamite explosions occurred which were believed to be due to the wrecking crews of structural iron workers. Among those for which the McNamaras and McManigal were thought to be responsible were the following:

Oct. 24, 1909—New telephone exchange, saw mill and garage destroyed in Indianapolis, Ind.

March 23, 1910—Courthouse in Omaha, Neb., and plant of Caldwell & Drake at Columbus, Ind., partly destroyed. Caldwell & Drake were contractors for the Omaha building.

Sept. 4, 1910—Plant of Lucas & Sons iron works in Peoria, Ill., and bridge under construction wrecked.

Oct. 1, 1910—Los Angeles Times building wrecked and twenty-one persons killed. Attempt made to blow up home of publisher, Gen. Harrison Gray Otis.

FORESTS AND FORESTRY.

[By Herbert A. Smith of the United States Forest Service.]

Our forests now cover 550,000,000 acres, or about one-fourth of the United States. Forests publicly owned contain one-fifth of all timber standing. Forests privately owned contain at least four-fifths of the standing timber. The timber privately owned is not only four times that publicly owned, but it is generally more valuable. Forestry is now practiced on 70 per cent of the forests publicly owned and on less than 1 per cent of the forests privately owned, or on only 18 per cent of the total area of forests.

The original forests of the United States contained timber in quantity and variety far beyond that upon any other area of similar size in the world. They covered 850,000,000 acres, with a stand of not less than 5,200,000,000,000 board feet of merchantable timber, according to present standards of use. There were five great forest regions—the northern, the southern, the central, the Rocky mountain and the Pacific.

The present rate of cutting is three times the annual growth of the forests of the United States. The great pineries of the lake states are nearing exhaustion, and heavy inroads have been made upon the supply of valuable timber throughout all parts of the country. The heavy demands for timber have been rapidly pushing the great centers of lumber industry toward the south and west. In consequence, the state of Washington has led for several years in lumber production, now followed in order by Louisiana, Mississippi and Oregon. In 1910 the production of yellow pine lumber amounted to fourteen and one-eighth billion feet; the Douglas fir of the northwest held second place with four and three-fourths billion feet, while oak came third with four and one-half billion feet. We take from our forests yearly, including waste in logging and in manufacture, 20,000,000,000 cubic feet of wood.

We use in a normal year 90,000,000 cords of firewood, 45,000,000,000 board feet of lumber, 148,500,000 ties, 1,750,000,000 staves, over 125,000,000 sets of heading, nearly 300,000,000 barrel hoops, 3,200,000 cords of native pulp wood, 165,000,000 cubic feet of round mine timbers and 1,500,000 cords of wood for distillation.

In 1910 about 4,002,000 cords of wood were used in the manufacture of paper, of which 948,000 cords were imported from Canada. The demand for pulp wood is making a severe drain on the spruce forests which furnish the principal supply. The forest service of the United States department of agriculture is conducting investigations to determine what other woods, such as scrub pine, white fir, tupelo and the like, can be successfully used.

A larger drain upon our forest resources is made by the demand for railroad ties, of which 148,231,000, equivalent to nearly five billion board feet, were used in 1910. White oak, hitherto the chief source of supply, is not plentiful enough to meet this demand indefinitely, and in many parts of the country the supply of chestnut, cedar and cypress is dwindling; however, seasoning and treating methods are being found, largely through the work of the forest service, by which cheaper and more plentiful woods, such as lodgepole pine in the northwest and loblolly pine in the south, are made fit for use as ties. A great saving has been effected in the naval stores industry, also largely through the work of the forest service, by the introduction of the so-called "cup" systems of turpentining in place of the old destructive system of "boxing." The new systems insure a larger product of better quality, and prolong the life of the longleaf pine forests upon which the industry depends.

UNITED STATES FOREST SERVICE.

The forest service is one of the bureaus of the department of agriculture. It has charge of the administration and protection of the national forests, and also promotes the practice of forestry generally through investigations and the diffusion of information.

The work of the government in forestry was initiated by the appointment of Dr. Franklin Hough in 1876 as special agent in the department of agriculture. In 1881 a division of forestry was created in that department. In 1901 this division became the bureau of forestry, and in 1905, when the care of the national forests was given to this bureau, its name became the forest service.

Previously the care of the national forests had been in the hands of the department of the interior. A law authorizing the president to set apart forest reserves was passed in 1891, but no provision for their administration and use was made until 1897. Previous to 1905 the bureau of forestry merely gave expert advice, on request, to the department of the interior concerning the application of forestry to the forest reserves. The change of name from "forest reserves" to "national forests" was made in 1906, to correct the impression that the forests were, as "reserves," withdrawn from use. Since the forest service took charge of them the fundamental aim has been to open them to the widest use consistent with their proper protection.

The reserves were set aside as follows: By President Harrison, 13,416,710 acres; by President Cleveland, 25,686,320 acres; by President McKinley, 7,050,089 acres; by President Roosevelt, 148,346,924 acres.

During the administration of President Taft 3,891,800 acres have been eliminated from the national forests, making their area at the close of the fiscal year 1911 190,608,243 acres. The eliminations threw out land which was found to be better suited for agricultural and other purposes than for forestry. An act of congress, passed in 1907, prohibits any additions by the president to the national forest area in Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, Wyoming and Colorado.

The following tables show the national forest expenditures and receipts for the fiscal year 1911, compared with those of the fiscal year 1910:

Expenditures for—	Administration and protection. Total.	Per acre.	Permanent improvements. Total.	Per acre.
1910.....	$3,752,316.91	$0.01945	$598,835.64	$0.00310
1911.....	5,335,886.97	0.02800	273,634.42	0.00143

Comparison of receipts from the several sources for the fiscal years 1910 and 1911:

Fiscal year.	Grazing. Total.	Per acre.	Timber. Total.	Per acre.
1910.....	$986,909.38	$0.00512	$1,043,428.20	$0.00541
1911.....	935,490.38	0.00490	1,015,125.39	0.00532

Fiscal year.	Special uses. Total.	Per acre.	All sources. Total.	Per acre.
1910.....	$59,810.50	$0.00031	$2,090,148.08	$0.01084
1911.....	76,290.18	0.00040	2,026,906.15	0.01063

Under the law 25 per cent of the gross receipts are paid to the states in which the national forests are located, to be expended for roads and schools. The amount to be paid to the states in this way from the receipts in 1911 is about $506,000.

The grazing receipts for 1911 were paid by the holders of 20,499 permits to graze 1,351,922 cattle, horses and hogs, and of 5,105 permits to graze 7,449,415 sheep and goats. The receipts from timber sales were paid by approximately 5,000 purchasers, who cut the equivalent of 374,678,000 board feet of timber. The receipts from special uses were paid by the holders of about 5,000 permits. In other words, these receipts represent profitable use of the forests by some 30,000 individuals or concerns. To the use for which payment was made must be added the heavy free use of the forests by the public. Figures for free use of timber are as follows:

	Number of permittees.	Cut (board feet).	Value.
1910.....	35,364	104,796,000	$176,166.51
1911.....	40,660	123,488,000	196,930.24

In issuing permits for reservoirs, conduits, power houses and transmission lines for commercial power development, the forest service has steadfastly insisted on conditions designed to prevent speculative or perpetual holdings and to secure the full development of available power and the payment of reasonable charges for the use of land.

The total stand of timber on the national forests, exclusive of Alaska, is estimated at over five hundred billion board feet.

The following table shows the total cut of timber from the national forests in the fiscal year 1911:

The average price on the stump for the timber sold in 1911 was $2.56 per thousand board feet.

The value of the public property administered by the forest service is estimated at over $2,000,000,000.

The great areas contained in the national forests have now been brought to a condition where they are beginning to serve the purposes of the west. The conservation of timber and forage through wise use and the protection of stream flow are the means of sustaining many industries which have contributed materially to the prosperity of the country.

At the head of the forest service are Forester Henry S. Graves and Associate Forester A. F. Potter. The work is organized under the following branches: Operation, and also lands, James B. Adams, in charge; silviculture, W. B. Greeley, in charge; grazing, A. F. Potter, in charge; products, laboratory, McGarvey Cline, in charge; acquisition of land under the Weeks law, William L. Hall, in charge.

The 153 national forests are distributed in six districts, with a district forester in charge of each, and headquarters as follows: District 1 (Montana, northeastern Washington, northern Idaho, northwestern South Dakota, northern Michigan, nortnern Minnesota and southwestern North Dakota), Missoula, Mont., F. A. Silcox, district forester; district 2 (Colorado, Wyoming, the remainder of South Dakota, Nebraska and western Kansas), Denver, Col., Smith Riley, district forester; district 3 (most of Arizona, Arkansas, Florida, New Mexico and Oklahoma), Albuquerque, N. M., A. C. Ringland, district forester; district 4 (Utah, southern Idaho, western Wyoming, eastern and central Nevada and a small portion of northwestern Arizona), Ogden, Utah, E. A. Sherman, district forester; district 5 (California and southwestern Nevada), San Francisco, Cal., Coert DuBois, district forester, and district 6 (Washington, Oregon and Alaska), Portland, Ore., George H. Cecil, district forester.

On July 1, 1911, the force employed by the forest service numbered 3,366. Of these 2,696 were employed upon the national forests and 670 were engaged in administrative, scientific and clerical work at the Washington and district headquarters. Of the employes on the national forests the force engaged principally in protective work numbered 1,952 men, as follows: Forest rangers, 250; assistant forest rangers, 1,174; forest guards, 526; game wardens, 2; hunters and trappers, 8. The protective force was therefore about one man for every 104,000 acres, or 163 square miles. (Prussia has one man for every 1,700 acres and Baden one for every 750.)

BRANCH OF SILVICULTURE.

The branch of silviculture directs the management of the national forests as regards both the systems of cutting mature timber and the work of forest planting, supervises their protection, cooperates with states in developing forest policies adapted to their requirements, co-operates with private forest owners who desire to practice forestry on their lands, and carries on silvicultural investigations of the important tree species of the United States. Its most important work is in connection with the management of the national forests, where the chief problem, after fire protection, is to replace the mature timber as it is sold and cut by young growth of valuable species.

In planting within the national forests, the primary object is to produce commercial timber, although in a number of cases planting has been done chiefly with the view of reforesting denuded watersheds, in order to control and regulate the flow of streams directly supplying cities and towns. During the year ended June 30, 1911, 25,230 acres in national forests were sown or planted to trees, chiefly Douglas fir, western yellow pine, Austrian pine and Engelmann spruce, in comparison with 7,400 acres the previous year; in fact, the areas planted in 1911 exceeded, by 10,000 acres, all the planting that previously had been done since the forests were created. There are forty-six government nurseries which supply the national forests. These have a present stock of about 38,800,000 plants and are capable of supplying 22,700,000 a year. In the east forest planting has been done mainly in co-operation with states and private owners, though experiments have been made with the French maritime pine for turpentine production, and with cork oak and Australian eucalyptus, in the Florida national forest.

At the request of the states the forest service makes examinations of their forest conditions, makes silvicultural studies of practical importance, suggests remedial legislation for giving the states a wise forest policy, etc. The cost of such work is shared by the states and the service. The service co-operates with private owners by sending its experts to examine timber tracts and report on the proper methods for managing and protecting them. The cost of such an examination is borne by the owner. During 1911 examinations were made of timber tracts aggregating 370,000 acres.

BRANCH OF GRAZING.

The branch of grazing supervises the grazing of live stock upon the national forests, the principal lines of work being: The allotment of grazing privileges, the issuance of grazing permits, the division of the ranges between different classes of stock or their owners and the regulation of the stock grazed under permit upon the ranges, and the development of the forage-producing capacity of the national forests by the restoration of depleted areas through systematic control of the stock grazed upon them or by artificial means, through the eradication of noxious range-destroying rodents and through the institution of new methods of range control. By co-operation with federal and state authorities in the enforcement of quarantine regulations, the national forests have been practically freed from infectious or contagious diseases fatal to live stock, and by an active campaign against predaceous animals destructive to live stock the annual loss from this source within the national forests has been reduced by several hundred thousand dollars.

The number of stock grazed during the last season (1911), under permit and by settlers without permit, was 1,347,938 head of cattle, horses and swine and 7,449,415 head of sheep and goats. The annual productive value of this number of stock is more than $20,000,000. The number of persons holding permits to graze live stock during the last year was in excess of 20,000.

BRANCH OF PRODUCTS.

The branch of products carries on studies, tests and demonstrations to further the more complete utilization of the products of the forest. A forest products laboratory is operated at the University of Wisconsin, where experiments are made to determine the properties of American woods, to ascertain cheap and effective treatments to prevent decay, to test the adaptability of untried woods for specific uses such as paper pulp, to develop uses for the material wasted in sawmill operations and to discover processes of obtaining valuable chemical by-products from the waste which cannot be otherwise utilized. An office of wood utilization is maintained at Chicago to promote the economic use of wood among the timber-consuming industries. Studies are made to find the kind, quantity and cost of timber consumed in different states and regions and also where the material comes from and what amount is lost through waste. The wood-consuming industries are aided in finding the most suitable raw material and in developing methods of utilizing their waste product. In the western states all products work centers in the district offices at Denver, San Francisco and Portland.

DENDROLOGICAL STUDIES.

An important part of the dendrological studies which are carried on by the service is the making of an accurate forest map of the distribution of tree species in the United States, to show the extent, composition and economic possibilities of our forest resources. Others of these studies concern the cedar forests of Texas and important but little known trees indigenous to the United States, the growth of which may profitably extend to new localities for economic purposes. Prominent among the latter are the desert pines of California. An investigation is being made of the present and probable future supply of western tanbark oak, as well as of other trees the barks of which are used to adulterate tanbark, and the tannin contents of the barks are being determined by the bureau of chemistry. Included also is a study of basket willows. Attention is given especially to the conditions under which high-grade basket rods may be produced. Approved basket willow cuttings are distributed free each spring to applicants interested in willow culture.

The dendrologist also gives technical information about trees, in response to inquiries, including the identification of the wood, seeds, foliage, etc., of native and exotic trees.

EASTERN NATIONAL FORESTS.

The act of March 1, 1911, commonly known as the Weeks law, provides for the acquisition of forest lands on the watersheds of navigable streams. Its purpose is to promote and protect the navigability of the streams by preserving the forest on the upland portions of their watersheds. Through this act means is afforded of extending the national forest system to regions where the government has hitherto owned no forest lands and taken no direct part in forest preservation.

The act imposes upon the forest service new duties in the selection, examination and valuation of areas for purchase, and this work required a new unit of organization. Immediate control was placed in charge of an assistant forester.

From April 1 to June 30, 1911, proposals were received covering 1,250,641 acres, of which 832,464 acres were within the general areas in the White mountains and the Southern Appalachians, which had been selected for purchase.

The examinations of the forest service prior to June 30, 1911, covered 140,787 acres. The service was ready to submit reports to the National Forest Reservation commission on this area of lands, but since the law requires reports also from the geological survey, and since the geological survey succeeded in examining only 89,590 acres, the commission could consider reports on only that area. The purchase of one tract of 31,377 acres was authorized.

At the beginning of the year 1912 the service has a force of thirty-five examiners working and will undoubtedly be able to complete reports and recommend purchase of lands to the full amount of the $2,000,000 available.

FOREST POLICY OF THE STATES.

New York has purchased and set aside 1,642,000 acres in the Adirondack and Catskill mountains as forest preserves, under the control of the forest, fish and game commission of the state. These lands and private lands in the preserve counties are protected from fire by an adequate system of wardens. Unfortunately, the constitution of the state prohibits the cutting of timber from state lands. In 1909 the commission distributed at cost to private owners 1,005,325 forest tree seedlings, and the waste and open land on the preserve is being gradually planted to trees under the supervision of trained foresters.

Pennsylvania has purchased more than 921,000 acres of land for state forest reserves, and the forestry commission has the right to purchase additional forest lands at a price not to exceed $5 an acre. The reserves are situated chiefly on the mountains of the central part of the state and located with special reference to protecting the water supply of cities and towns. The state forest reserves are not only protected from fire, but are managed according to forestry principles, the mature timber being cut and sold. A school for training forest rangers for the reserves is maintained at Mont Alto. There is a well-organized forest fire protective system in the state. The state distributes forest trees for planting and gives advice in the management of forest lands to private owners.

Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan have well-organized state forest departments. Minnesota has 61,000 acres reserved; Wisconsin, 385,000 acres, and Michigan, 232,000. These are protected from fire and the open land is being planted and the mature timber cut and sold. Each of these states protects the forest land of private owners as well as that of the state forest reserves from fire and distributes tree seedlings for planting to land owners at cost. Ohio, New Hampshire and Vermont also distribute planting material to private owners and give them advice in regard to methods of forest management. The following states have forestry departments which seek to protect from fire by means of an organized warden system all or the greater portion of the forest lands of the state: Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Jersey, Maryland, Oregon and California, while Washington and Idaho provide for such protection through legal associations of land owners. Maine supports a very efficient forest fire service covering the unorganized townships in the northern part of the state. In the remaining townships the selectmen are ex officio wardens. Most of these states also have small state forests, that of New Jersey being 14,000 acres. Other states which have forest officers charged with forest interests are Rhode Island, Indiana, Kansas, Montana, North Carolina and West Virginia. South Carolina, Alabama and Louisiana have recently passed or have under consideration advanced forestry legislation. The recently adopted law of Louisiana is especially noteworthy in that it provides for a forest fire protective organization by means of a tax of ¾ of a cent on every 1,000 board feet of lumber sawed in the state.

INTERNATIONAL ARBITRATION TREATIES.

What was regarded as a long step toward the goal of universal peace was taken Aug. 3, 1911, when representatives of the United States, Great Britain and France signed arbitration treaties providing for the peaceful settlement of all questions arising between them, including those affecting the "vital interest, independence and honor" of the contracting parties. This important exception in former arbitration treaties was ignored in the new conventions, which were so broad as to cover practically all contingencies.

The proposal to remove the old limitations to arbitration treaties was first made by President William H. Taft in a speech at a dinner of the American Society for the Judicial Settlement of International Disputes, in Washington, Dec. 17, 1910. He later reiterated his belief in the possibility of arbitrating all kinds of questions, and March 13, 1911, Sir Edward Grey, minister of foreign affairs in the British cabinet, made a speech in the house of commons, strongly commending the stand taken by President Taft. The utterances of the statesmen met with public approval on both sides of the Atlantic and the work of embodying the idea in actual treaties was at once begun. France assented to the general proposition from the start and the negotiations included that country as well as Britain and the United States. The original draft of the new form of arbitration treaty was drawn by Secretary of State Knox, but in perfecting the document he had the assistance of Ambassador James Bryce of Great Britain and Ambassador Jusserand of France.

The text of the treaty with Great Britain is herewith given in full, that with France being identical in terms except as to names of contracting parties and plenipotentiaries:

"The United States of America and his majesty the king of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British dominions beyond the seas, emperor of India, being equally desirous of perpetuating the peace, which has happily existed between the two nations, as established in 1814 by the treaty of Ghent, and has never since been interrupted by an appeal to arms, and which has been confirmed and strengthened in recent years by a number of treaties whereby pending controversies have been adjusted by agreement or settled by arbitration or otherwise provided for so that now for the first time there are no important questions of difference outstanding between them, and being resolved that no future differences shall be a cause of hostilities between them or interrupt their good relations and friendship;

"The high contracting parties have, therefore, determined, in furtherance of these ends, to conclude a treaty extending the scope and obligations of the policy of arbitration adopted in their present arbitration treaty of April 4, 1908, so as to exclude certain exceptions contained in that treaty and to provide means for the peaceful solution of all questions of difference which it shall be found impossible in future to settle by diplomacy.

"For that purpose they have appointed as their respective plenipotentiaries:

"The president of the United States of America, the Hon. Philander C. Knox, secretary of state of the United States, and

"His Britannic majesty, the Rt.-Hon. James Bryce, O. M., his ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary at Washington,

"Who, having communicated to one another their full powers, found in good and due form, have agreed upon the following articles:

ARTICLE I.

"All differences hereafter arising between the high contracting parties, which it has not been possible to adjust by diplomacy, relating to international matters in which the high contracting parties are concerned by virtue of a claim of right made by one against the other under treaty or otherwise, and which are justiciable in their nature by reason of being susceptible of decision by the application of the principles of law or equity, shall be submitted to the permanent court of arbitration established at The Hague by the convention of Oct. 18, 1907, or to some other arbitral tribunal as may be decided in each case by special agreement, which special agreement shall provide for the organization of such tribunal if necessary, define the scope of the powers of the arbitrators, the question or questions at issue, and settle the terms of reference and the procedure thereunder.

"The provisions of articles 37 to 90, inclusive, of the convention for the pacific settlement of international disputes concluded at the second peace conference at The Hague on Oct. 18, 1907, so far as applicable, and unless they are inconsistent with or modified by the provisions of the special agreement, to be concluded in each case, and excepting articles 53 and 54 of such convention, shall govern the arbitration proceedings to be taken under this treaty.

"The special agreement in each case shall be made on the part of the United States by the president of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the senate thereof, his majesty's government preserving the right before concluding a special agreement in any matter affecting the interests of a self-governing dominion of the British empire to obtain the concurrence therein of the government of that dominion.

"Such agreement shall be binding when confirmed by the two governments by an exchange of notes.

ARTICLE II.

"The high contracting parties further agree to institute, as occasion arises, and as hereinafter provided, a joint high commission of inquiry, to which, upon the request of either party, shall be referred for impartial and conscientious investigation any controversy between the parties within the scope of article I., before such controversy has been submitted to arbitration, and also any other controversy hereafter arising between them, even if they are not agreed that it falls within the scope of article I.; provided, however, that such reference may be postponed until the expiration of one year after the date of the formal request therefor, in order to afford an opportunity for diplomatic discussion and adjustment of the questions in controversy, if either party desires such postponement.

"Whenever a question or matter of difference is referred to the joint high commission of inquiry, as herein provided, each of the high contracting parties shall designate three of its nationals to act as members of the commission of inquiry for the purposes of such reference, or the commission may be otherwise constituted in any particular case by the terms of reference, the membership of the commission and the terms of reference to be determined in each case by an exchange of notes.

"The provisions of articles 9 to 26, inclusive, of the convention for the pacific settlement of international disputes concluded at The Hague Oct. 18, 1907, so far as applicable, and unless they are inconsistent with the provisions of this treaty, or are modified by the terms of reference agreed upon in any particular case, shall govern the organization and procedure of the commission.

ARTICLE III.

"The joint high commission of inquiry, instituted in each case as provided for in article II., is authorized to examine into and report upon the particular questions or matters referred to it for the purpose of facilitating the solution of disputes by elucidating the facts and to define the issues presented by such questions, and also to include in its report such recommendations and conclusions as may be appropriate.

"The reports of the commission shall not be regarded as decisions of the questions or matters so submitted, either on the facts or on the law, and shall in no way have the character of an arbitral award.

"It is further agreed, however, that in cases in which the parties disagree as to whether or not a difference is subject to arbitration under article I. of this treaty, that question shall be submitted to the joint high commission of inquiry, and if all or all but one of the members of the commission agree and report that such difference is within the scope of article I. it shall be referred to arbitration in accordance with the provisions of this treaty.

ARTICLE IV.

"The commission shall have power to administer oaths to witnesses and take evidence on oath whenever deemed necessary in any proceeding, or inquiry, or matter within its jurisdiction under this treaty; and the high contracting parties agree to adopt such legislation as may be appropriate and necessary to give the commission the powers above mentioned, and to provide for the issue of subpœnas and for compelling the attendance of witnesses in the proceedings before the commission.

On the inquiry both sides must be heard, and each party is entitled to appoint an agent, whose duty it shall be to represent his government before the commission and to present to the commission, either personally or through counsel retained for that purpose, such evidence and arguments as he may deem necessary and appropriate for the information of the commission.

ARTICLE V.

"The commission shall meet whenever called upon to make an examination and report under the terms of this treaty, and the commission may fix such times and places for its meetings as may be necessary, subject at all times to special call or direction of the two governments. Each commissioner, upon the first joint meeting of the commission after his appointment, shall, before proceeding with the work of the commission, make and subscribe a solemn declaration in writing that he will faithfully and impartially perform the duties imposed upon him under this treaty, and such declaration shall be entered on the records of the proceedings of the commission.

The United States and British sections of the commission may each appoint a secretary, and these shall act as joint secretaries of the commission at its joint sessions, and the commission may employ experts and clerical assistants from time to time as it may deem advisable. The salaries and personal expenses of the commission and of the agents and of counsel and of the secretaries shall be paid by their respective governments and all reasonable and necessary joint expenses of the commission incurred by it shall be paid in equal moieties by the high contracting parties.

ARTICLE VI.

"This treaty shall supersede the arbitration treaty concluded between the high contracting parties on April 4, 1908, but all agreements, awards and proceedings under that treaty shall continue in force and effect and this treaty shall not affect in any way the provisions of the treaty of Jan. 11, 1909, relating to questions arising between the United States and the Dominion of Canada.

ARTICLE VII.

"The present treaty shall be ratified by the president of the United States of America, by and with the advice and consent of the senate thereof, and by his Britannic majesty. The ratifications shall be exchanged at Washington as soon as possible, and the treaty shall take effect on the date of the exchange of its ratifications. It shall thereafter remain in force continuously, unless and until terminated by twenty-four months' written notice given by either high contracting party to the other.

"In faith whereof, the respective plenipotentiaries have signed this treaty in duplicate and have hereunto affixed their seals.

"Done at Washington, the third day of August, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and eleven."

OPPOSITION IN SENATE.

The treaties were, immediately upon their conclusion, transmitted to the United States senate for ratification. The committee on foreign relations, to which it was referred, submitted a majority and a minority report. The majority report, presented by Senator Lodge, recommended that the treaties be ratified only with certain amendments safeguarding the prerogatives of the senate. The most important amendment proposed striking out of article 3 the stipulation to refer to a joint commission the question whether a difference is arbitrable. The minority report, presented by Senator Root for himself and Senators Cullom and Burton, recommended that the treaties be ratified with an accompanying express declaration that they did not embrace questions of governmental policy.

Up to the time this edition of The Daily News Almanac and Year-Book went to press the treaties had not been ratified.

THE BOY SCOUT MOVEMENT.

The boy scout movement was started in England by Lieut.-Gen. Sir Robert S. S. Baden-Powell in 1908. Boys were enrolled in a uniform corps, properly officered, for the purpose of training them in patriotism, chivalry, self-reliance, woodcraft, tracking, healthful exercises and good citizenship. The plan was successful from the start and thousands of boys in all parts of the British empire belong to the organization. Similar corps have been started in the United States, Germany, Argentina, Chile, Smyrna, China and other countries. The movement is nonmilitary.

RAILWAY STRIKES IN ENGLAND AND IRELAND.

Dissatisfied with the scale of wages paid and working conditions generally, the railway employes of the united kingdom went on a strike Aug. 15, 1911. For a time the passenger and freight traffic on many of the lines was seriously affected and business generally was much disturbed. Riots attended by bloodshed and loss of life occurred in a number of places. In Liverpool troops had to be called out to restore order. It was estimated that between 150,000 and 200,000 men obeyed the order of the Amalgamted Society of Railway Servants to quit work. The strike continued for four days and food supplies were beginning to get scarce and dear in London and other large cities when on Aug. 19 a compromise was reached and peace restored. The settlement was made at a conference between Chancellor Lloyd-George and representatives of the railroad employes and was consented to by the railway managers. It was agreed that a committee should be appointed to look into the workings of the conciliation act of 1907, which the men claimed to be the root of all their grievances. The government also promised to help the men and the railroads so that more adequate wages would be possible.

In Ireland, Sept. 22, the railway employes' union attempted to bring about a general strike, but it proved a fizzle and lasted only a few days. Some of the lines in the southern part of the country were tied up, but most of the roads continued business about as usual.

STRIKE OF SEAMEN IN EUROPE.

The International Seamen's union called a strike at the principal ports of Europe June 14, 1911. The order was generally obeyed and shipping experienced considerable delay, particularly as the coal porters were on strike at the same time. Many steamers were temporarily tied up in English, Dutch and German ports and sailing schedules were disarranged to some extent, but in the course of a few weeks new men were secured and business proceeded as usual. The strike, which was for better wages and working conditions, proved a failure.

REVOLUTIONARY MOVEMENTS IN CHINA.

Aug. 27, 1908, an imperial decree was issued in Pekin, China, announcing the convocation of a parliament and the proclamation of a constitution in the ninth year from that date. Oct. 31, 1909, a decree was issued fixing the classes from which the upper house of parliament or the senate was to be elected and Oct. 3, 1910, this body met for the first time. It was composed of 262 members, ninety-eight of whom were nominated by the emperor, the remainder representing the provincial assemblies, the grand council and various boards. The provincial assemblies were instituted in 1908 with purely consultative functions. The senate continued in session until Jan. 11, 1911, when it was dissolved.

May 8 an edict was issued providing for a cabinet and a privy council. The cabinet consisted of a president and ministers of foreign affairs, finance, interior, war, navy, justice, agriculture, commerce, and dependencies. The duty of the cabinet was to assist the emperor in the responsibilities of government, but as the president was given the right of veto over the other members and was the direct means of communication with the throne the ministry possessed but little real power. The privy council was made up of forty-four personal advisers of the emperor. Prince Ching was made president or premier and minister of foreign affairs.

These measures did not have the effect intended. The delay in establishing a real constitutional government on modern lines and the general hatred of Manchu rule, with its corruption, inefficiency and tyranny, caused great dissatisfaction among progressive Chinamen. Disturbances in various parts of the empire increased in number and seriousness. The enemies of the government began to organize, first secretly and then openly, and they found sympathizers not only among the common people, but among merchants, statesmen and non-Manchu officials. Even soldiers from the imperial regiments joined their ranks. While not entirely agreed upon any policy except, possibly, that of overthrowing the dynasty, many of the revolutionaries declared themselves in favor of establishing a republic modeled after that in the United States.

The first outbreaks were mainly confined to the provinces of Szechuan, Hupeh and Hunan, but they spread rapidly to nearly every part of the empire. One large city after another fell into the hands of the rebels, and by the middle of October the government was in a panic and was preparing to abandon the struggle. Then Prince Chun, the regent, summoned to the assistance of the throne Yuan Shih-kai, an influential statesman whom he had stripped of power in 1909 because of his efforts on behalf of popular government. At the same time the government announced that it would grant the Chinese a parliament not dominated by Manchu princes and also a responsible ministry without further delay. This had the effect of postponing, if not preventing, the fall of the dynasty, though the fighting between the imperialist troops and the rebels continued with undiminished energy.

Following is a brief chronological summary of the principal events in the rebellion up to the time this edition of The Daily News Almanac and Year-Book goes to press:

Oct. 26—Throne dismisses Sheng Hsuan Huai, orders Prince Ching before a board of inquiry, and orders released from custody the president of the Szechuan provincial assembly and other leaders of the revolt at Chengtu.

Nov. 19—Massacre of nine white missionaries at Hsianfu in province of Shenshi.

Nov. 28—Imperial troops take Wuchang and Hanyang.

Dec. 6—Prince Chun, the regent and father of the child emperor, abdicates. His place as guardian of the throne is taken jointly by Shih-Hsu, a Manchu prince and former president of the national assembly, and Hsu-Shi Chang, vice-president of the privy council. Prince Chun's mind reported to have failed under strain of revolution. Negotiations for $50,000,000 foreign loan for the reorganization of the currency broken off and not to be resumed until after a stable government has been established; Russia and Japan to demand representation in future loans.

Ramon Caceres, president of the republic of Santo Domingo, was assassinated by Luis Tejera and Jaime Mote, Jr., in Santo Domingo city, Nov. 20, 1911. He had made a call at the residence of Leonte Vasquez when he was shot by the two men, dying half an hour later in the American legation, to which he was taken. The killing was the result of personal enmity and not of politics. Caceres was elected president in June, 1908, to serve six years. Dec. 2 Senator Eladio was elected to fill the vacancy.

NUMBER OF WORDS IN THE BIBLE.

According to Prof. Albert S. Cook of Yale university only about 6,000 words are used in the authorized version of the bible. Milton used about 13,000 and Shakespeare something like 21,000 words. These facts were brought out in connection with the bible tercentenary, which was celebrated in 1911. It was generally supposed in view of its great influence upon literature that the bible contained many more words.

FIRE CALAMITY IN NEW YORK CITY.

One hundred and forty-one persons were killed in a fire which burned out a ten story factory building at the northwest corner of Washington place and Greene street, New York, N. Y., Saturday afternoon, March 25, 1911. Most of the victims were girls or young women employed by the Triangle Waist company, which occupied the three upper floors of the structure. The fire started on the eighth floor in a scrap heap under a cutting table and was probably caused by a lighted cigarette thrown into the waste. It was 5:30 o'clock and some of the 700 employes were at the cashier's window waiting for their pay checks when the flames caused an instant panic. Some escaped by the elevators, which were kept running as long as possible, and others got away by climbing to the roof, whence they succeeded in reaching the adjoining building. Several of these were helped by members of a law class. Some came down the narrow stairways or by a fire escape in an interior court.

The flames made rapid headway and the three floors were filled with black smoke, making it impossible for those who remained to find their way to safety. Many of these were found dead on the floor near the sewing machines at which they had been working. Finding escape by stairways and elevators cut off, bewildered by the smoke and made frantic by the heat, scores of the young women and some of the male employes rushed for the windows opening to the street. One after another, and sometimes two or three together, they jumped and were dashed to death on iron and glass canopies and stone sidewalks below. A few were saved by means of life nets, but the strands were weak and most of those who jumped into them broke through and were killed. A large number of the victims were of foreign birth and could speak only Yiddish or Italian. The bodies of those who were burned to death were so badly charred or disfigured that in many cases they could not be identified.

LAKE FRONT SITE FOR FIELD MUSEUM.

At the meeting of the city council held Dec. 11, 1911, it was announced by Mayor Harrison that an agreement had been reached between the south park commissioners and the Illinois Central company by which the people of the city regained possession of the lake front from Park row to 51st street, making it possible to erect the permanent buildings of the Field Museum of Natural History on the lake front between Park row and 12th street. The railroad corporation agreed to abandon the Park row station and build a new one on the south side of the widened 12th street, facing north and abutting on Michigan avenue. The plan further provided for the building of a boulevard by the park commissioners connecting Jackson park with Grant park, and the construction of bathing beaches and pleasure islands. In return for surrendering its riparian rights and turning over the land occupied by the passenger station and other property to the east of it, the Illinois Central company, it was agreed, should be permitted to widen and straighten its right of way between 12th and 50th streets.

The whole plan, which was made in accordance with the "city beautiful" scheme, was submitted to the city council for approval.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE (NO. 1).

To the Senate and House of Representatives:
This message is the first of several which I shall send to congress during the interval between the opening of its regular session and its adjournment for the Christmas holidays. The amount of information to be communicated as to the operations of the government, the number of important subjects calling for comment by the executive and the transmission to congress of exhaustive reports of special commissions make it impossible to include in one message of a reasonable length a discussion of the topics that ought to be brought to the attention of the national legislature at its first regular session.

THE ANTITRUST LAW—THE SUPREME COURT DECISIONS.

In May last the Supreme court handed down decisions in the suits in equity brought by the United States to enjoin the further maintenance of the Standard Oil trust and of the American Tobacco trust and to secure their dissolution. The decisions are epoch making and serve to advise the business world authoritatively of the scope and operation of the antitrust act of 1890. The decisions do not depart in any substantial way from the previous decisions of the court in construing and applying this important statute, but they clarify those decisions by further defining the already admitted exceptions to the literal construction of the act. By the decrees they furnish a useful precedent as to the proper method of dealing with the capital and property of illegal trusts. These decisions suggest the need and wisdom of additional or supplemental legislation to make it easier for the entire business community to square with the rule of action and legality thus finally established and to preserve the benefit, freedom and spur of reasonable competition without loss of real efficiency or progress.

The statute in its first section declares to be illegal "every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce among the several states or with foreign nations," and in the second declares guilty of a misdemeanor "every person who shall monopolize or attempt to monopolize or combine or conspire with any other person to monopolize any part of the trade or commerce of the several states or with foreign nations."

In two early cases, where the statute was invoked to enjoin a transportation rate agreement between interstate railroad companies, it was held that it was no defense to show that the agreement as to rates complained of was reasonable at common law, because it was said that the statute was directed against all contracts and combinations in restraint of trade, whether reasonable at common law or not. It was plain from the record, however, that the contracts complained of in those cases would not have been deemed reasonable at common law. In subsequent cases the court said that the statute should be given a reasonable construction and refused to include within its inhibition certain contractual restraints of trade which it denominated as incidental or as indirect.

These cases of restraint of trade that the court excepted from the operation of the statute were instances which, at common law, would have been called reasonable. In the Standard Oil and Tobacco cases, therefore, the court merely adopted the tests of the common law, and in defining exceptions to the literal application of the statute only substituted for the test of being incidental or indirect that of being reasonable, and this without varying in the slightest the actual scope and effect of the statute. In other words, all the cases under the statute which have now been decided would have been decided the same way if the court had originally accepted in its construction the rule at common law.

It has been said that the court, by introducing into the construction of the statute common law distinctions, has emasculated it. This is obviously untrue. By its judgment every contract and combination in restraint of interstate trade made with the purpose or necessary effect of controlling prices by stifling competition, or of establishing in whole or in part a monopoly of such trade, is condemned by the statute. The most extreme critics cannot instance a case that ought to be condemned under the statute which is not brought within its terms as thus construed.

The suggestion is also made that the Supreme court by its decision in the last two cases has committed to the court the undefined and unlimited discretion to determine whether a case of restraint of trade is within the terms of the statute. This is wholly untrue. A reasonable restraint of trade at common law is well understood and is clearly defined. It does not rest in the discretion of the court. It must be limited to accomplish the purpose of a lawful main contract, to which, in order that it shall be enforceable at all, it must be incidental. If it exceed the needs of that contract it is void.

The test of reasonableness was never applied by the court at common law to contracts or combinations or conspiracies in restraint of trade whose purpose was or whose necessary effect would be to stifle competition, to control prices or to establish monopolies. The courts never assumed power to say that such contracts or combinations or conspiracies might be lawful if the parties to them were only moderate in the use of the power thus secured and did not exact from the public too great and exorbitant prices. It is true that many theorists, and others engaged in business violating the statute, have hoped that some such line could be drawn by courts; but no court of authority has ever attempted it. Certainly there is nothing in the decisions of the latest two cases from which such a dangerous theory of judicial discretion in enforcing this statute can derive the slightest sanction.

We have been twenty-one years making this statute effective for the purposes for which it was enacted. The Knight case was discouraging and seemed to remit to the states the whole available power to attack and suppress the evils of the trusts. Slowly, however, the error of that judgment was corrected, and only in the last three or four years has the heavy hand of the law been laid upon the great illegal combinations that have exercised such an absolute dominion over many of our industries. Criminal prosecutions have been brought and a number are pending, but juries have felt averse to convicting for jail sentences, and judges have been most reluctant to impose such sentences on men of respectable standing in society whose offense has been regarded as merely statutory. Still, as the offense becomes better understood and the committing of it partakes more of studied and deliberate defiance of the law, we can be confident that juries will convict individuals and that jail sentences will be imposed.

THE REMEDY IN EQUITY BY DISSOLUTION.

In the Standard Oil case the Supreme and Circuit courts found the combination to be a monopoly of the interstate business of refining, transporting and marketing petroleum and its products, effected and maintained through thirty-seven different corporations, the stock of which was held by a New Jersey company. It, in effect, commanded the dissolution of this combination, directed the transfer and pro rata distribution by the New Jersey company of the stock held by it in the thirty-seven corporations to and among its stockholders; and the corporations and individual defendants were enjoined from conspiring or combining to restore such monopoly; and all agreements between the subsidiary corporations tending to produce or bring about further violations of the act were enjoined.

In the Tobacco case the court found that the individual defendants, twenty-nine in number, had been engaged in a successful effort to acquire complete dominion over the manufacture, sale and distribution of tobacco in this country and abroad, and that this had been done by combinations made with a purpose and effect to stifle competition, control prices and establish a monopoly, not only in the manufacture of tobacco, but also of tinfoil and licorice used in its manufacture and of its products of cigars, cigarettes and snuffs. The Tobacco suit presented a far more complicated and difficult case than the Standard Oil suit for a decree which would effectuate the will of the court and end the violation of the statute. There was here no single holding company as in the case of the Standard Oil trust. The main company was the American Tobacco company, a manufacturing, selling and holding company. The plan adopted to destroy the combination and restore competition involved the redivision of the capital and plants of the whole trust between some of the companies constituting the trust and new companies organized for the purposes of the decree and made parties to it, and numbering, new and old, fourteen.

SITUATION AFTER READJUSTMENT.

The American Tobacco company (old), readjusted capital, $92,000,000; the Liggett & Meyers Tobacco company (new), capital, $67,000,000; the P. Lorillard company (new), capital, $47,000,000, and the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco company (old), capital, $7,525,000, are chiefly engaged in the manufacture and sale of chewing and smoking tobacco and cigars. The former one tinfoil company is divided into two, one of $825,000 capital and the other of $400,000. The one snuff company is divided into three companies, one with a capital of $15,000,000, another with a capital of $8,000,000 and a third with a capital of $8,000,000. The licorice companies are two, one with a capital of $5,753,300 and another with a capital of $2,000,000. There is also the British-American Tobacco company, a British corporation, doing business abroad with a capital of $26,000,000; the Porto Rican Tobacco company, with a capital of $1,800,000, and the corporation of United Cigar Stores, with a capital of $9,000,000.

Under this arrangement each of the different kinds of business will be distributed between two or more companies, with a division of the prominent brands in the same tobacco products, so as to make competition not only possible but necessary. Thus the smoking tobacco business of the country is divided so that the present independent companies have 21.39 per cent, while the American Tobacco company will have 33.08 per cent, the Liggett & Meyers 20.05 per cent, the Lorillard company 22.82 per cent and the Reynolds company 2.66 per cent.

The stock of the other thirteen companies, both preferred and common, has been taken from the defendant American Tobacco company and has been distributed among its stockholders. All covenants restricting competition have been declared null and further performance of them has been enjoined. The preferred stock of the different companies has now been given voting power, which was denied it under the old organization. The ratio of the preferred stock to the common was as 78 to 40. This constitutes a very decided change in the character of the ownership and control of each company.

In the original suit there were twenty-nine defendants who were charged with being the conspirators through whom the illegal combination acquired and exercised its unlawful dominion. Under the decree these defendants will hold amounts of stock in the various distributee companies ranging from 41 per cent as a maximum to 28½ per cent as a minimum, except in the case of one small company, the Porto Rican Tobacco company, in which they will hold 45 per cent. The twenty-nine individual defendants are enjoined for three years from buying any stock except from each other, and the group is thus prevented from extending its control during that period. All parties to the suit, and the new companies who are made parties, are enjoined perpetually from in any way effecting any combination between any of the companies in violation of the statute by way of resumption of the old trust. Each of the fourteen companies is enjoined from acquiring stock in any of the others. All these companies are enjoined from having common directors or officers, or common buying or selling agents, or common offices, or lending money to each other.

SIZE OF NEW COMPANIES.

Objection was made by certain independent tobacco companies that this settlement was unjust because it left companies with very large capital in active business, and that the settlement that would be effective to put all on an equality would be a division of the capital and plant of the trust into small fractions, in amount more nearly equal to that of each of the independent companies. This contention results from a misunderstanding of the antitrust law and its purpose. It is not intended thereby to prevent the accumulation of large capital in business enterprises in which such a combination can secure reduced cost of production, sale and distribution. It is directed against such an aggregation of capital only when its purpose is that of stifling competition, enhancing or controlling prices and establishing a monopoly. If we shall have by decree defeated these purposes and restored competition between the large units into which the capital and plant have been divided, we shall have accomplished the useful purpose of the statute.

CONFISCATION NOT THE PURPOSE OF THE STATUTE.

It is not the purpose of the statute to confiscate the property and capital of the offending trusts. Methods of punishment by fine or imprisonment of the individual offenders, by fine of the corporation or by forfeiture of its goods in transportation, are provided, but the proceeding in equity is a specific remedy to stop the operation of the trust by injunction and prevent the future use of the plant and capital in violation of the statute.

EFFECTIVENESS OF DECREE.

I venture to say that not in the history of American law has a decree more effective for such a purpose been entered by a court than that against the Tobacco trust. As Circuit Judge Noyes said in his judgment approving the decree:

"The extent to which it has been necessary to tear apart this combination and force it into new forms, with the attendant burdens, ought to demonstrate that the federal antitrust statute is a drastic statute, which accomplishes effective results; which, so long as it stands on the statute books, must be obeyed, and which cannot be disobeyed without incurring far reaching penalties. And, on the other hand, the successful reconstruction of this organization should teach that the effect of enforcing this statute is not to destroy, but to reconstruct—not to demolish, but to re-create in accordance with the conditions which the congress has declared shall exist among the people of the United States."

COMMON STOCK OWNERSHIP.

It has been assumed that the present pro rata and common ownership in all these companies by former stockholders of the trust would insure a continuance of the same old single control of all the companies into which the trust has by decree been disintegrated. This is erroneous and is based upon the assumed inefficacy and innocuousness of judicial injunctions. The companies are enjoined from co-operation or combination; they have different managers, directors, purchasing and sales agents. If all or many of the numerous stockholders, reaching into the thousands, attempt to secure concerted action of the companies with a view to the control of the market, their number is so large that such an attempt could not well be concealed, and its prime movers and all its participants would be at once subject to contempt proceedings and imprisonment of a summary character. The immediate result of the present situation will necessarily be activity by all the companies under different managers, and then competition must follow, or there will be activity by one company and stagnation by another. Only a short time will inevitably lead to a change in ownership of the stock, as all opportunity for continued co-operation must disappear. Those critics who speak of this disintegration in the trust as a mere change of garments have not given consideration to the inevitable working of the decree and understand little the personal danger of attempting to evade or set at naught the solemn injunction of a court whose object is made plain by the decree and whose inhibitions are set forth with a detail and comprehensiveness unexampled in the history of equity jurisprudence.

The effect of these two decisions has led to decrees dissolving the combination of manufacturers of electric lamps and a southern wholesale grocers' association, an interlocutory decree against the powder trust, with directions by the Circuit court compelling dissolution, and other combinations of a similar history are now negotiating with the department of justice looking to a disintegration by decree and reorganization in accordance with law. It seems possible to bring about these reorganizations without general business disturbance.

MOVEMENT FOR REPEAL OF THE ANTITRUST LAW.

But now that the antitrust act is seen to be effective for the accomplishment of the purpose of its enactment, we are met by a cry from many different quarters for its repeal. It is said to be obstructive of business progress, to be an attempt to restore old fashioned methods of destructive competition between small units and to make impossible those useful combinations of capital and the reduction of the cost of production that are essential to continued prosperity and normal growth.

In the recent decisions the Supreme court makes clear that there is nothing in the statute which condemns combinations of capital or mere bigness of plant organized to secure economy in production and a reduction of its cost. It is only when the purpose or necessary effect of the organization and maintenance of the combination or the aggregation of immense size are the stifling of competition, actual and potential, and the enhancing of prices and establishing a monopoly that the statute is violated. Mere size is no sin against the law. The merging of two or more business plants necessarily eliminates competition between the units thus combined, but this elimination is in contravention of the statute only when the combination is made for the purpose of ending this particular competition in order to secure control of and enhance prices and create a monopoly.

The complaint is made of the statute that it is not sufficiently definite in its description of that which is forbidden to enable business men to avoid its violation. The suggestion is that we may have a combination of two corporations, which may run on for years, and that subsequently the attorney-general may conclude that it was a violation of the statute, and that which was supposed by the combiners to be innocent then turns out to be a combination in violation of the statute. The answer to this hypothetical case is that when men attempt to amass such stupendous capital as will enable them to suppress competition, control prices and establish a monopoly, they know the purpose of their acts. Men do not do such a thing without having it clearly in mind. If what they do is merely for the purpose of reducing the cost of production, without the thought of suppressing competition by use of the bigness of the plant they are creating, then they cannot be convicted at the time the union is made, nor can they be convicted later, unless it happen that later on they conclude to suppress competition and take the usual methods for doing so, and thus establish for themselves a monopoly. They can, in such a case, hardly complain if the motive which subsequently is disclosed is attributed by the court to the original combination.

NEW REMEDIES SUGGESTED.

Much is said of the repeal of this statute and of constructive legislation intended to accomplish the purpose and blaze a clear path for honest merchants and business men to follow. It may be that such a plan will be evolved, but I submit that the discussions which have been brought out in recent days by the fear of the continued execution of the antitrust law have produced nothing but glittering generalities and have offered no line of distinction or rule of action as definite and as clear as that which the Supreme court itself lays down in enforcing the statute.

I see no objection—and indeed I can see decided advantages—in the enactment of a law which shall describe and denounce methods of competition which are unfair and are badges of the unlawful purpose denounced in the antitrust law. The attempt and purpose to suppress a competitor by underselling him at a price so unprofitable as to drive him out of business, or the making of exclusive contracts with customers under which they are required to give up association with other manufacturers, and numerous kindred methods for stifling competition and effecting monopoly, should be described with sufficient accuracy in a criminal statute on the one hand to enable the government to shorten its task by prosecuting single misdemeanors instead of an entire conspiracy, and, on the other hand, to serve the purpose of pointing out more in detail to the business community what must be avoided.

FEDERAL INCORPORATION RECOMMENDED.

In a special message to congress on Jan. 7, 1910, I ventured to point out the disturbance to business that would probably attend the dissolution of these offending trusts. I said:

"But such an investigation and possible prosecution of corporations whose prosperity or destruction affects the comfort not only of stockholders but of millions of wage earners, employes and associated tradesmen, must necessarily tend to disturb the confidence of the business community, to dry up the now flowing sources of capital from its places of hoarding and produce a halt in our present prosperity that will cause suffering and strained circumstances among the innocent many for the faults of the guilty few. The question which I wish in this message to bring clearly to the consideration and discussion of congress is whether, in order to avoid such a possible business danger, something cannot be done by which these business combinations may be offered a means, without great financial disturbance, of changing the character, organization and extent of their business into one within the lines of the law under federal control and supervision, securing compliance with the antitrust statute.

"Generally, in the industrial combinations called 'trusts,' the principal business is the sale of goods in many states and in foreign markets; in other words, the interstate and foreign business far exceeds the business done in any one state. This fact will justify the federal government in granting a federal charter to such a combination to make and sell in interstate and foreign commerce the products of useful manufacture under such limitations as will secure a compliance with the antitrust law. It is possible so to frame a statute that while it offers protection to a federal company against harmful, vexatious and unnecessary invasion by the states, it shall subject it to reasonable taxation and control by the states with respect to its purely local business.

"Corporations organized under this act should be prohibited from acquiring and holding stock in other corporations (except for special reasons, upon approval by the proper federal authority), thus avoiding the creation under national auspices of the holding company with subordinate corporations in different states, which has been such an effective agency in the creation of the great trusts and monopolies.

"If the prohibition of the antitrust act against combinations in restraint of trade is to be effectively enforced, it is essential that the national government shall provide for the creation of national corporations to carry on a legitimate business throughout the United States. The conflicting laws of the different states of the union with respect to foreign corporations make it difficult, if not impossible, for one corporation to comply with their requirements so as to carry on business in a number of different states."

I renew the recommendation of the enactment of a general law providing for the voluntary formation of corporations to engage in trade and commerce among the states and with foreign nations. Every argument which was then advanced for such a law and every explanation which was at that time offered to possible objections have been confirmed by our experience since the enforcement of the antitrust statute has resulted in the actual dissolution of active commercial organizations.

It is even more manifest now than it was then that the denunciation of conspiracies in restraint of trade should not and does not mean the denial of organizations large enough to be intrusted with our interstate and foreign trade. It has been made more clear now than it was then that a purely negative statute like the antitrust law may well be supplemented by specific provisions for the building up and regulation of legitimate national and foreign commerce.

The drafting of the decrees in the dissolution of the present trusts, with a view to their reorganization into legitimate corporations, has made it especially apparent that the courts are not provided with the administrative machinery to make the necessary inquiries preparatory to reorganization, or to pursue such inquiries, and they should be empowered to invoke the aid of the bureau of corporations in determining the suitable reorganization of the disintegrated parts. The Circuit court and the attorney-general were greatly aided in framing the decree in the Tobacco trust dissolution by an expert from the bureau of corporations.

FEDERAL CORPORATION COMMISSION PROPOSED.

I do not set forth in detail the terms and sections of a statute which might supply the constructive legislation permitting and aiding the formation of combinations of capital into federal corporations. They should be subject to rigid rules as to their organization and procedure, including effective publicity, and to the closest supervision as to the issue of stock and bonds by an executive bureau or commission in the department of commerce and labor, to which in times of doubt they might well submit their proposed plans for future business. It must be distinctly understood that incorporation under a federal law could not exempt the company thus formed and its incorporators and managers from prosecution under the antitrust law for subsequent illegal conduct, but the publicity of its procedure and the opportunity for frequent consultation with the bureau or commission in charge of the incorporation as to the legitimate purpose of its transactions would offer it as great security against successful prosecutions for violations of the law as would be practical or wise.

Such a bureau or commission might well be invested also with the duty already referred to, of aiding courts in the dissolution and re-creation of trusts within the law. It should be an executive tribunal of the dignity and power of the comptroller of the currency or the interstate commerce commission, which now exercise supervisory power over important classes of corporations under federal regulation.

The drafting of such a federal incorporation law would offer ample opportunity to prevent many manifest evils in corporate management to-day, including irresponsibility of control in the hands of the few who are not the real owners.

INCORPORATION VOLUNTARY.

I recommend that the federal charters thus to be granted shall be voluntary, at least until experience justifies mandatory provisions. The benefit to be derived from the operation of great businesses under the protection of such a charter would attract all who are anxious to keep within the lines of the law. Other large combinations that fail to take advantage of the federal incorporation will not have a right to complain if their failure is ascribed to unwillingness to submit their transactions to the careful official scrutiny, competent supervision and publicity attendant upon the enjoyment of such a charter.

ONLY SUPPLEMENTAL LEGISLATION NEEDED.

The opportunity thus suggested for federal incorporation, it seems to me, is suitable constructive legislation needed to facilitate the squaring of great industrial enterprises to the rule of action laid down by the antitrust law. This statute as construed by the Supreme court must continue to be the line of distinction for legitimate business. It must be enforced, unless we are to banish individualism from all business and reduce it to one common system of regulation or control of prices like that which now prevails with respect to public utilities, and which when applied to all business would be a long step toward state socialism.

The antitrust act is the expression of the effort of a freedom loving people to preserve equality of opportunity. It is the result of the confident determination of such a people to maintain their future growth by preserving uncontrolled and unrestricted the enterprise of the individual, his industry, his ingenuity, his intelligence and his independent courage.

For twenty years or more this statute has been upon the statute book. All knew its general purpose and approved. Many of its violators were cynical over its assumed impotence. It seemed impossible of enforcement. Slowly the mills of the courts ground, and only gradually did the majesty of the law assert itself. Many of its statesmen-authors died before it became a living force, and they and others saw the evil grow which they had hoped to destroy. Now its efficacy is seen; now its power is heavy; now its object is near achievement. Now we hear the call for its repeal on the plea that it interferes with business prosperity, and we are advised, in most general terms, how by some other statute and in some other way the evil we are just stamping out can be cured, if we only abandon this work of twenty years and try another experiment for another term of years.

It is said that the act has not done good. Can this be said in the face of the effect of the Northern Securities decree? That decree was in no way so drastic or inhibitive in detail as either the Standard Oil decree or the Tobacco decree, but did it not stop for all time the then powerful movement toward the control of all the railroads of the country in a single hand? Such a one-man power could not have been a healthful influence in the republic, even though exercised under the general supervision of an interstate commission.

Do we desire to make such ruthless combinations and monopolies lawful? When all energies are directed, not toward the reduction of the cost of production for the public benefit by a healthful competition, but toward new ways and means for making permanent in a few hands the absolute control of the conditions and prices prevailing in the whole field of industry, then individual enterprise and effort will be paralyzed and the spirit of commercial freedom will be dead. WILLIAM H. TAFT.

The White House, Dec. 5, 1911.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE (NO. 2).

To the Senate and House of Representatives: The relations of the United States with other countries have continued during the last twelve months upon a basis of the usual good will and friendly intercourse.

ARBITRATION.

The year just past marks an important general movement on the part of the powers for broader arbitration. In the recognition of the manifold benefits to mankind in the extension of the policy of the settlement of international disputes by arbitration rather than by war, and in response to a widespread demand for an advance in that direction on the part of the people of the United States and of Great Britain and of France, new arbitration treaties were negotiated last spring with Great Britain and France, the terms of which were designed, as expressed in the preamble of these treaties, to extend the scope and obligations of the policy of arbitration adopted in our present treaties with those governments. To pave the way for this treaty with the United States, Great Britain negotiated an important modification in its alliance with Japan, and the French government also expedited the negotiations with signal good will. The new treaties have been submitted to the senate and are awaiting its advice and consent to their ratification. All the essentials of these important treaties have long been known, and it is my earnest hope that they will receive prompt and favorable action.

CLAIM OF ALSOP & CO. SETTLED.

I am glad to report that on July 5 last the American claim of Alsop & Co. against the government of Chile was finally disposed of by the decision of his Britannic majesty George V., to whom, as amiable compositeur, the matter had been referred for determination. His majesty made an award of nearly $1,000,000 to the claimants, which was promptly paid by Chile. The settlement of this controversy has happily eliminated from the relations between the republic of Chile and the United States the only question which for two decades had given the two foreign offices any serious concern and makes possible the unobstructed development of the relations of friendship which it has been the aim of this government in every possible way to further and cultivate.

In further illustration of the practical and beneficent application of the principle of arbitration and the underlying broad spirit of conciliation, I am happy to advert to the part of the United States in facilitating amicable settlement of disputes which menaced the peace between Panama and Costa Rica and between Haiti and the Dominican republic.

Since the date of their independence Colombia and Costa Rica had been seeking a solution of a boundary dispute, which came as an heritage from Colombia to the new republic of Panama upon its beginning life as an independent nation. Although the disputants had submitted this question for decision to the president of France under the terms of an arbitration treaty, the exact interpretation of the provisions of the award rendered had been a matter of serious disagreement between the two countries, both contending for widely different lines even under the terms of the decision. Subsequently and since 1903 this boundary question had been the subject of fruitless diplomatic negotiations between the parties. In January, 1910, at the request of both governments, the agents representing them met in conference at the department of state and subsequently concluded a protocol submitting this long pending controversy to the arbitral judgment of the chief justice of the United States, who consented to act in this capacity. A boundary commission, according to the international agreement, has now been appointed, and it is expected that the arguments will shortly proceed and that this long standing dispute will be honorably and satisfactorily terminated.

Again, a few months ago it appeared that the Dominican republic and Haiti were about to enter upon hostilities because of complications growing out of an acrimonious boundary dispute which the efforts of many years had failed to solve. The government of the United States, by a friendly interposition of good offices, succeeded in prevailing upon the parties to place their reliance upon some form of pacific settlement. Accordingly, on the friendly suggestion of this government, the two governments empowered commissioners to meet at Washington in conference at the state department in order to arrange the terms of submission to arbitration of the boundary controversy.

CHAMIZAL ARBITRATION NOT SATISFACTORY.

Our arbitration of the Chamizal boundary question with Mexico was unfortunately abortive, but with the earnest efforts on the part of both governments which its importance commands, it is felt that an early practical adjustment should prove possible.

During the past year the republic of Venezuela celebrated the one hundreth anniversary of its independence. The United States sent, in honor of this event, a special embassy to Caracas, where the cordial reception and generous hospitality shown it were most gratifying as a further proof of the good relations and friendship existing between that country and the United States.

The recent political events in Mexico received attention from this government because of the exceedingly delicate and difficult situation created along our southern border and the necessity for taking measures properly to safeguard American interests. The government of the United States, in its desire to secure a proper observance and enforcement of the so-called neutrality statutes of the federal government, issued directions to the appropriate officers to exercise a diligent and vigilant regard for the requirements of such rules and laws. Although a condition of actual armed conflict existed, there was no official recognition of belligerency involving the technical neutrality obligations of international law.

On the 6th of March last, in the absence of the secretary of state, I had a personal interview with Mr. Wilson, the ambassador of the United States to Mexico, in which he reported to me that the conditions in Mexico were much more critical than the press dispatches disclosed; that President Diaz was on a volcano of popular uprising; that the small outbreaks which had occurred were only symptomatic of the whole condition; that a very large per cent of the people were in sympathy with the insurrection; that a general explosion was probable at any time, in which case he feared that the 40,000 or more American residents in Mexico might be assailed, and that the very large American investments might be injured or destroyed.

After a conference with the secretary of war and the secretary of the navy, I thought it was wise to assemble an army division of full strength at San Antonio, Tex., a brigade of three regiments at Galveston, a brigade of infantry in the Los Angeles district of southern California, together with a squadron of battle ships and cruisers and transports at Galveston and a small squadron of ships at San Diego. At the same time, through our representative at the City of Mexico, I expressed to President Diaz the hope that no apprehensions might result from unfounded conjecture as to these military maneuvers, and assured him that they had no significance which should cause concern to his government.

The mobilization was effected with great promptness, and on the 15th of March, through the secretary of war and the secretary of the navy, in a letter addressed to the chief of staff, I issued the following instructions:

"It seems my duty as commander in chief to place troops in sufficient number where, if congress shall direct that they enter Mexico to save American lives and property, an effective movement may be promptly made. Meantime the movement of the troops to Texas and elsewhere near the boundary, accompanied with sincere assurances of the utmost good will toward the present Mexican government and with larger and more frequent patrols along the border to prevent insurrectionary expeditions from American soil, will hold up the hands of the existing government and will have a healthy moral effect to prevent attacks upon Americans and their property in any subsequent general internecine strife. Again, the sudden mobilization of a division of troops has been a great test of our army and full of useful instruction, while the maneuvers that are thus made possible can occupy the troops and their officers to great advantage.

"The assumption by the press that I contemplate intervention on Mexican soil to protect American lives or property is of course gratuitous, because I seriously doubt whether I have such authority under any circumstances, and if I had I would not exercise it without express congressional approval. Indeed, as you know, I have already declined, without Mexican consent, to order a troop of cavalry to protect the breakwater we are constructing just across the border in Mexico at the mouth of the Colorado river to save the Imperial valley, although the insurrectos had scattered the Mexican troops and were taking our horses and supplies and frightening our workmen away. My determined purpose, however, is to be in a position so that when danger to American lives and property in Mexico threatens and the existing government is rendered helpless by the insurrection, I can promptly execute congressional orders to protect them, with effect.

"Meantime I send you this letter, through the secretary, to call your attention to some things in connection with the presence of the division in the southwest which have doubtless occurred to you, but which I wish to emphasize.

"In the first place, I want to make the mobilization a first-class training for the army, and I wish you would give your time and that of the war college to advising and carrying out maneuvers of a useful character, and plan to continue to do this during the next three months. By that time we may expect that either Ambassador Wilson's fears will have been realized and chaos and its consequences have ensued, or that the present government of Mexico will have so readjusted matters as to secure tranquillity—a result devoutly to be wished. The troops can then be returned to their posts. I understood from you in Washington that Gen. Aleshire said that you could probably meet all the additional expense of this whole movement out of the present appropriations if the troops continue in Texas for three months. I sincerely hope this is so. I observe from the newspapers that you have no blank cartridges, but I presume that this is an error, or that it will be easy to procure those for use as soon as your maneuvers begin.

"Second, Texas is a state ordinarily peaceful, but you cannot put 20,000 troops into it without running some risk of a collision between the people of the state, and especially the Mexicans who live in Texas near the border and who sympathize with the insurrectos, and the federal soldiers. For that reason I beg you to be as careful as you can to prevent friction of any kind. We were able in Cuba, with the army of pacification there of something more than 5,000 troops, to maintain them for a year without any trouble, and I hope you can do the same thing in Texas. Please give your attention to this and advise all the officers in command of the necessity for very great circumspection in this regard.

"Third, one of the great troubles in the concentration of troops is the danger of disease, and I suppose that you have adopted the most modern methods for the preventing and, if necessary, for stamping out epidemics. That is so much a part of a campaign that it hardly seems necessary for me to call attention to it.

"Finally, I wish you to examine the question of the patrol of the border and put as many troops on that work as is practicable, and more than are now engaged in it, in order to prevent the use of our borderland for the carrying on of the insurrection. I have given assurances to the Mexican ambassador on this point.

"I sincerely hope that this experience will always be remembered by the army and navy as a useful means of education, and I should be greatly disappointed if it resulted in any injury or disaster to our forces from any cause. I have taken a good deal of responsibility in ordering this mobilization, but I am ready to answer for it if only you and those under you use the utmost care to avoid the difficulties which I have pointed out.

"You may have a copy of this letter made and left with Gen. Carter and such other generals in command as you may think wise and necessary to guide them in their course, but to be regarded as confidential."

I am more than happy to record here the fact that all apprehensions as to the effect of the presence of so large a military force in Texas proved groundless; no disturbances occurred; the conduct of the troops was exemplary and the public reception and treatment of them was all that could have been desired, and this notwithstanding the presence of a large number of Mexican refugees in the border territory.

From time to time communications were received from Ambassador Wilson, who had returned to Mexico, confirming the view that the massing of American troops in the neighborhood had had good effect. By dispatch of April 3, 1911, the ambassador said:

"The continuing gravity of the situation here and the chaos that would ensue should the constitutional authorities be eventually overthrown, thus greatly increasing the danger to which American lives and property are already subject, confirm the wisdom of the president in taking those military precautions which, making every allowance for the dignity and the sovereignty of a friendly state, are due to our nationals abroad.

"Charged as I am with the responsibility of safeguarding these lives and property, I am bound to say to the department that our military dispositions on the frontier have produced an effective impression on the Mexican mind, and may, at any moment, prove to be the only guaranties for the safety of our nationals and their property. If it should eventuate that conditions here require more active measures by the president and congress, sporadic attacks might be made upon the lives and property of our nationals, but the ultimate result would be order and adequate protection."

The insurrection continued and resulted in engagements between the regular Mexican troops and the insurgents, and this along the border, so that in several instances bullets from the contending forces struck American citizens engaged in their lawful occupations on American soil.

Proper protests were made against these invasions of American rights to the Mexican authorities. On April 17, 1911, I received the following telegram from the governor of Arizona:

"As a result of to-day's fighting across the international line, but within gunshot range of the heart of Douglas, five Americans wounded on this side of the line. Everything points to repetition of these casualties on to-morrow, and while the federals seem disposed to keep their agreement not to fire into Douglas, the position of the insurrectionists is such that when fighting occurs on the east and southeast of the intrenchments people living in Douglas are put in danger of their lives. In my judgment radical measures are needed to protect our innocent people, and if anything can be done to stop the fighting at Agua Prieta the situation calls for such action. It is impossible to safeguard the people of Douglas unless the town be vacated. Can anything be done to relieve situation, now acute?"

After a conference with the secretary of state, the following telegram was sent to Gov. Sloan, on April 18, 1911, and made public:

"Your dispatch received. Have made urgent demand upon Mexican government to issue instructions to prevent firing across border by Mexican federal troops, and am awaiting reply. Meantime I have sent direct warning to the Mexican and insurgent forces near Douglas. I infer from your dispatch that both parties attempt to heed the warning, but that in the strain and exigency of the contest wild bullets still find their way into Douglas. The situation might justify me in ordering our troops to cross the border and attempt to stop the fighting, or to fire upon both combatants from the American side. But if I take this step I must face the possibility of resistance and greater bloodshed, and also the danger of having our motives misconstrued and misrepresented, and of thus inflaming Mexican popular indignation against many thousand Americans now in Mexico and jeopardizing their lives and property. The pressure for general intervention under such conditions it might not be practicable to resist. It is impossible to foresee or reckon the consequences of such a course, and we must use the greatest self-restraint to avoid it. Pending my urgent representation to the Mexican government, I cannot therefore order the troops at Douglas to cross the border, but I must ask you and the local authorities, in case the same danger recurs, to direct the people of Douglas to place themselves where bullets cannot reach them and thus avoid casualty. I am loath to endanger Americans in Mexico, where they are necessarily exposed, by taking a radical step to prevent injury to Americans on our side of the border who can avoid it by a temporary inconvenience."

I am glad to say that no further invasion of American rights of any substantial character occurred.

The presence of a large military and naval force available for prompt action near the Mexican border proved to be most fortunate under the somewhat trying conditions presented by this invasion of American rights. Had no movement theretofore taken place and because of these events it had been necessary then to bring about the mobilization, it must have had sinister significance. On the other hand, the presence of the troops before and at the time of the unfortunate killing and wounding of American citizens at Douglas made clear that the restraint exercised by our government in regard to this occurrence was not due to a lack of force or power to deal with it promptly and aggressively, but was due to a real desire to use every means possible to avoid direct intervention in the affairs of our neighbor, whose friendship we valued and were most anxious to retain.

The policy and action of this government were based upon an earnest friendliness for the Mexican people as a whole, and it is a matter of gratification to note that this attitude of strict impartiality as to all factions in Mexico and of sincere friendship for the neighboring nation, without regard for party allegiance, has been generally recognized and has resulted in an even closer and more sympathetic understanding between the two republics and a warmer regard one for the other. Action to suppress violence and restore tranquillity throughout the Mexican republic was of peculiar interest to this government, in that it concerned the safeguarding of American life and property in that country. The government of the United States had occasion to accord permission for the passage of a body of Mexican rurales through Douglas, Ariz., to Tia Juana, Mexico, for the suppression of general lawlessness which had for some time existed in the region of northern Lower California.

On May 25, 1911, President Diaz resigned and Senor de la Barra was chosen provisional president. Elections for president and vice-president were thereafter held throughout the republic, and Senor Francisco I. Madero was formally declared elected on Oct. 15 to the chief magistracy. On Nov. 6 President Madero entered upon the duties of his office.

Since the inauguration of President Madero a plot has been unearthed against the present government, to begin a new insurrection. Pursuing the same consistent policy which this administration has adopted from the beginning, it directed an investigation into the conspiracy charged, and this investigation has resulted in the indictment of Gen. Bernardo Reyes and others and the seizure of a number of officers and men and horses and accouterments assembled upon the soil of Texas for the purpose of invading Mexico. Similar proceedings had been taken during the insurrection against the Diaz government, resulting in the indictment and prosecution of persons found to be engaged in violating the neutrality laws of the United States in aid of that uprising.

The record of this government in respect of the recognition of constituted authority in Mexico therefore is clear.

As to the situation in Central America, I have taken occasion in the past to emphasize most strongly the importance that should be attributed to the consummation of the conventions between the republics of Nicaragua and of Honduras and this country, and I again earnestly recommend that the necessary advice and consent of the senate be accorded to these treaties, which will make it possible for these Central American republics to enter upon an era of genuine economic national development. The government of Nicaragua, which has already taken favorable action on the convention, has found it necessary, pending the exchange of final ratifications, to enter into negotiations with American bankers for the purpose of securing a temporary loan to relieve the present financial tension. In connection with this temporary loan and in the hope of consummating, through the ultimate operation of the convention, a complete and lasting economic regeneration, the government of Nicaragua has also decided to engage an American citizen as collector-general of customs.

The claims commission, on which the services of two American citizens have been sought, and the work of the American financial adviser should accomplish a lasting good of inestimable benefit to the prosperity, commerce and peace of the republic. In considering the ratification of the conventions with Nicaragua and Honduras, there rests with the United States the heavy responsibility of the fact that their rejection here might destroy the progress made and consign the republics concerned to still deeper submergence in bankruptcy, revolution and national jeopardy.

Our relations with the republic of Panama, peculiarly important, due to mutual obligations and the vast interests created by the canal, have continued in the usual friendly manner, and we have been glad to make appropriate expression of our attitude of sympathetic interest in the endeavors of our neighbor in undertaking the development of the rich resources of the country. With reference to the internal political affairs of the republic, our obvious concern is in the maintenance of public peace and constitutional order and the fostering of the general interests created by the actual relations of the two countries, without the manifestation of any preference for the success of either of the political parties.

THE PAN AMERICAN UNION.

The Pan American union, formerly known as the bureau of American republics, maintained by the joint contributions of all the American nations, has during the last year enlarged its practical work as an international organization and continues to prove its usefulness as an agency for the mutual development of commerce, better acquaintance and closer intercourse between the United States and her sister American republics.

THE FAR EAST.

THE CHINESE LOANS.

The past year has been marked in our relations with China by the conclusion of two important international loans, one for the construction of the Hukuang railways, the other for the carrying out of the currency reform to which China was pledged by treaties with the United States, Great Britain and Japan, of which mention was made in my last annual message.

It will be remembered that early in 1909 an agreement was consummated among British, French and German financial groups whereby they proposed to lend the Chinese government funds for the construction of railways in the provinces of Hunan and Hupeh, reserving for their nationals the privilege of engineering the construction of the lines and of furnishing the materials required for the work. After negotiations with the governments and groups concerned an agreement was reached whereby American, British, French and German nationals should participate upon equal terms in this important and useful undertaking. Thereupon the financial groups, supported by their respective governments, began negotiations with the Chinese government which terminated in a loan to China of $30,000,000, with the privilege of increasing the amount to $50,000,000. The co-operative construction of these trunk lines should be of immense advantage, materially and otherwise, to China and should greatly facilitate the development of the bountiful resources of the empire. On the other hand, a large portion of these funds is to be expended for materials, American products having equal preference with those of the other three lending nations, and as the contract provides for branches and extensions subsequently to be built on the same terms, the opportunities for American materials will reach considerable proportions.

Knowing the interest of the United States in the reform of Chinese currency, the Chinese government, in the autumn of 1910, sought the assistance of the American government to procure funds with which to accomplish that all important reform. In the course of the subsequent negotiations there was combined with the proposed currency loan one for certain industrial developments in Manchuria, the two loans aggregating the sum of $50,000,000. While this was originally to be solely an American enterprise, the American government, consistently with its desire to secure a sympathetic and practical cooperation of the great powers toward maintaining the principle of equality of opportunity and the administrative integrity of China, urged the Chinese government to admit to participation in the currency loan the associates of the American group in the Hukuang loan. While of immense importance in itself, the reform contemplated in making this loan is but preliminary to other and more comprehensive fiscal reforms which will be of incalculable benefit to China and foreign interests alike, since they will strengthen the Chinese empire and promote the rapid development of international trade.

When these negotiations were begun it was understood that a financial adviser was to be employed by China in connection with the reform, and in order that absolute equality in all respects among the lending nations might be scrupulously observed, the American government proposed the nomination of a neutral adviser, which was agreed to by China and the other governments concerned. On Sept. 28, 1911, Dr. Vissering, president of the Dutch Java bank and a financier of wide experience in the orient, was recommended to the Chinese government for the post of monetary adviser.

Especially important at the present, when the ancient Chinese empire is shaken by civil war incidental to its awakening to the many influences and activities of modernization, are the co-operative policy of good understanding which has been fostered by the international projects referred to above and the general sympathy of view among all the powers interested in the far east. While safeguarding the interests of our nationals, this government is using its best efforts in continuance of its traditional policy of sympathy and friendship toward the Chinese empire and its people, with the confident hope for their economic and administrative development, and with the constant disposition to contribute to their welfare in all proper ways consistent with an attitude of strict impartiality as between contending factions.

For the first time in the history of the two countries, a Chinese cruiser, the Haichi, under the command of Admiral Ching, recently visited New York, where the officers and men were given a cordial welcome.

NEW JAPANESE TREATY.

The treaty of commerce and navigation between the United States and Japan, signed in 1894, would by a strict interpretation of its provisions have terminated on July 17, 1912. Japan's general treaties with the other powers, however, terminated in 1911, and the Japanese government expressed an earnest desire to conduct the negotiations for a new treaty with the United States simultaneously with its negotiations with the other powers. There were a number of important questions involved in the treaty, including the immigration of laborers, revision of the customs tariff and the right of Americans to hold real estate in Japan. The United States consented to waive all technicalities and to enter at once upon negotiations for a new treaty on the understanding that there should be a continuance throughout the life of the treaty of the same effective measures for the restriction of immigration of laborers to American territory which had been in operation with entire satisfaction to both governments since 1908. The Japanese government accepted this basis of negotiation, and a new treaty was quickly concluded, resulting in a highly satisfactory settlement of the other questions referred to.

A satisfactory adjustment has also been effected of the questions growing out of the annexation of Korea by Japan.

The recent visit of Admiral Count Togo to the United States as the nation's guest afforded a welcome opportunity to demonstrate the friendly feeling so happily existing between the two countries.

SIAM.

There has been a change of sovereigns in Siam and the American minister at Bangkok was accredited in a special capacity to represent the United States at the coronation ceremony of the new king.

EUROPE AND THE NEAR EAST.

In Europe and the near east, during the past twelvemonth, there has been at times considerable political unrest. The Moroccan question, which for some months was the cause of great anxiety, happily appears to have reached a stage at which it need no longer be regarded with concern. The Ottoman empire was occupied for a period by strife in Albania and is now at war with Italy. In Greece and the Balkan countries the disquieting potentialities of this situation have been more or less felt. Persia has been the scene of a long internal struggle. These conditions have been the cause of uneasiness in European diplomacy, but thus far without direct political concern to the United States.

In the war which unhappily exists between Italy and Turkey this government has no direct political interest, and I took occasion at the suitable time to issue a proclamation of neutrality in that conflict. At the same time all necessary steps have been taken to safeguard the personal interests of American citizens and organizations in so far as affected by the war.

COMMERCE WITH THE NEAR EAST.

In spite of the attendant economic uncertainties and detriments to commerce, the United States has gained markedly in its commercial standing with certain of the nations of the near east. Turkey, especially, is beginning to come into closer relations with the United States through the new interest of American manufacturers and exporters in the possibilities of those regions, and it is hoped that foundations are being laid for a large and mutually beneficial exchange of commodities between the two countries. This new interest of Turkey in American goods is indicated by the fact that a party of prominent merchants from a large city in Turkey recently visited the United States to study conditions of manufacture and export here and to get into personal touch with American merchants, with a view to co-operating more intelligently in opening up the markets of Turkey and the adjacent countries to our manufactures. Another indication of this new interest of America in the commerce of the near east is the recent visit of a large party of American merchants and manufacturers to central and eastern Europe, where they were entertained by prominent officials and organizations of the large cities, and new bonds of friendship and understanding were established which cannot but lead to closer and greater commercial interchange.

CORONATION OF KING GEORGE V.

The 22d of June of the present year marked the coronation of His Britannic Majesty King George V. In honor of this auspicious occasion I sent a special embassy to London. The courteous and cordial welcome extended to this government's representatives by his majesty and the people of Great Britain has further emphasized the strong bonds of friendship happily existing between the two nations.

SETTLEMENT WITH GREAT BRITAIN.

As the result of a determined effort on the part of both Great Britain and the United States to settle all of their outstanding differences a number of treaties have been entered into between the two countries in recent years, by which nearly all of the unsettled questions between them of any importance have either been adjusted by agreement or arrangements made for their settlement by arbitration. A number of the unsettled questions referred to consist of pecuniary claims presented by each country against the other, and in order that as many of these claims as possible should be settled by arbitration a special agreement for that purpose was entered into between the two governments on the 18th day of August, 1910, in accordance with article II. of the general arbitration treaty with Great Britain of April 4, 1908. Pursuant to the provisions of this special agreement a schedule of claims has already been agreed upon, and the special agreement, together with this schedule, received the approval of the senate when submitted to it for that purpose at the last session of congress. Negotiations between the two governments for the preparation of an additional schedule of claims are already well advanced, and it is my intention to submit such schedule as soon as it is agreed upon to the senate for its approval, in order that the arbitration proceedings may be undertaken at an early date. In this connection the attention of congress is particularly called to the necessity for an appropriation to cover the expense incurred in submitting these claims to arbitration.

PRESENTATION OF VON STEUBEN STATUE.

In pursuance of the act of congress, approved June 23, 1910, the secretary of state and the joint committee on the library entered into a contract with the sculptor, Albert Jaegers, for the execution of a bronze replica of the statue of Gen. von Steuben erected in Washington, for presentation to his majesty the German emperor and the German nation in recognition of the gift of the statue of Frederick the Great made by the emperor to the people of the United States.

The presentation was made on Sept. 2 last by representatives whom I commissioned as the special mission of this government for the purpose.

The German emperor has conveyed to me by telegraph, on his own behalf and that of the German people, an expression of appreciative thanks for this action of congress.

RUSSIA AND AMERICA.

By direction of the state department our ambassador to Russia has recently been having a series of conferences with the minister of foreign affairs of Russia with a view to securing a clearer understanding and construction of the treaty of 1832 between Russia and the United States and the modification of any existing Russian regulations which may be found to interfere in any way with the full recognition of the rights of American citizens under this treaty. I believe that the government of Russia is addressing itself seriously to the need of changing the present practice under the treaty and that sufficient progress has been made to warrant the continuance of those conferences in the hope that there may soon be removed any justification of the complaints of treaty violation now prevalent in this country.

I expect that immediately after the Christmas recess I shall be able to make a further communication to congress on this subject.

LIBERIA.

Negotiations for the amelioration of conditions found to exist in Liberia by the American commission, undertaken through the department of state, have been concluded and it is only necessary for certain formalities to be arranged in securing the loan which it is hoped will place that republic on a practical financial and economic footing.

RECOGNITION OF PORTUGUESE REPUBLIC.

The national constituent assembly, regularly elected by the vote of the Portuguese people, having on June 19 last unanimously proclaimed a republican form of government, the official recognition of the government of the United States was given to the new republic in the afternoon of the same day.

SPITZBERGEN ISLANDS.

Negotiations for the betterment of conditions existing in the Spitzbergen islands and the adjustment of conflicting claims of American citizens and Norwegian subjects to lands in that archipelago are still in progress.

The supplementary protocol to The Hague convention for the establishment of an international prize court, mentioned in my last annual message, embodying stipulations providing for an alternative procedure which would remove the constitutional objection to that part of The Hague convention which provides that there may be an appeal to the proposed court from the decisions of national courts, has received the signature of the governments parties to the original convention and has been ratified by the government of the United States, together with the prize court convention.

The deposit of the ratifications with the government of the Netherlands awaits action by the powers on the declaration, signed at London on Feb. 26, 1909, of the rules of international law to be recognized within the meaning of article VII. of The Hague convention for the establishment of an international prize court.

The fur seal controversy, which for nearly twenty-five years has been the source of serious friction between the United States and the powers bordering upon the north Pacific ocean, whose subjects have been permitted to engage in pelagic sealing against the fur seal herds having their breeding grounds within the jurisdiction of the United States, has at last been satisfactorily adjusted by the conclusion of the north Pacific sealing convention entered into between the United States, Great Britain, Japan and Russia on the 7th of July last. This convention is a conservation measure of very great importance, and if it is carried out in the spirit of reciprocal concession and advantage upon which it is based there is every reason to believe that not only will it result in preserving the fur seal herds of the north Pacific ocean and restoring them to their former value for the purposes of commerce, but also that it will afford a permanently satisfactory settlement of a question the only other solution of which seemed to be the total destruction of the fur seals. In another aspect, also, this convention is of importance in that it furnishes an illustration of the feasibility of securing a general international game law for the protection of other mammals of the sea, the preservation of which is of importance to all the nations of the world.

The attention of congress is especially called to the necessity for legislation on the part of the United States for the purpose of fulfilling the obligations assumed under this convention, to which the senate gave its advice and consent on the 24th day of July last.

INDUSTRIAL PROPERTY UNION.

The conference of the International Union for the Protection of Industrial Property, which, under the authority of congress, convened at Washington on May 16, 1911, closed its labors on June 2, 1911, by the signature of three acts, as follows:

(1) A convention revising the Paris convention of March 20, 1883, for the protection of industrial property, as modified by the additional act signed at Brussels on Dec. 14, 1900;

(2) An arrangement to replace the arrangement signed at Madrid on April 14, 1891, for the international registration of trade marks, and the additional act with regard thereto signed at Brussels on Dec. 14, 1900; and

(3) An arrangement to replace the arrangement signed at Madrid on April 14, 1891, relating to the repression of false indication of production of merchandise.

The United States is a signatory of the first convention only, and this will be promptly submitted to the senate.

INTERNATIONAL OPIUM COMMISSION.

In a special message transmitted to the congress on the 7th of January, 1911, in which I concurred in the recommendations made by the secretary of state in regard to certain needful legislation for the control of our interstate and foreign traffic in opium and other menacing drugs, I quoted from my annual message of Dec. 7, 1909, in which I announced that the results of the international opium commission held at Shanghai in February, 1909, at the invitation of the United States, had been laid before this government; that the report of that commission showed that China was making remarkable progress and admirable efforts toward the eradication of the opium evil; that the interested governments had not permitted their commercial interests to prevent their co-operation in this reform; and, as a result of collateral investigations of the opium question in this country, I recommended that the manufacture, sale and use of opium in the United States should be more rigorously controlled by legislation.

Prior to that time and in continuation of the policy of this government to secure the co-operation of the interested nations the United States proposed an international opium conference with full powers for the purpose of clothing with the force of international law the resolutions adopted by the above mentioned commission, together with their essential corollaries. The other powers concerned cordially responded to the proposal of this government, and, I am glad to be able to announce, representatives of all the powers assembled in conference at The Hague on the first of this month.

Since the passage of the opium exclusion act more than twenty states have been animated to modify their pharmacy laws and bring them in accord with the spirit of that act, thus stamping out, to a measure, the intrastate traffic in opium and other habit forming drugs. But, although I have urged on the congress the passage of certain measures for federal control of the interstate and foreign traffic in these drugs, no action has yet been taken. In view of the fact that there is now sitting at The Hague so important a conference, which has under review the municipal laws of the different nations for the mitigation of their opium and other allied evils, a conference which will certainly deal with the international aspects of these evils, it seems to me most essential that the congress should take immediate action on the antinarcotic legislation to which I have already called attention by a special message.

BUENOS AIRES CONVENTIONS.

The four important conventions signed at the fourth Pan American conference at Buenos Aires, providing for the regulation of trade marks, patents and copyrights, and for the arbitration of pecuniary claims, have, with the advice and consent of the senate, been ratified on the part of the United States and the ratifications have been deposited with the government of the Argentine republic in accordance with the requirements of the conventions. I am not advised that similar action has been taken by any other of the signatory governments.

One of the notable advances in international morality accomplished in recent years was an arrangement entered into on April 13 of the present year between the United States and other powers for the repression of the circulation of obscene publications.

In my last annual message I referred to the tariff negotiations of the department of state with foreign countries in connection with the application, by a series of proclamations, of the minimum tariff of the United States to importations from the several countries, and I stated that, in its general operation, section 2 of the new tariff law had proved a guaranty of continued commercial peace, although there were, unfortunately, instances where foreign governments dealt arbitrarily with American interests within their jurisdiction in a manner injurious and inequitable. During the past year some instances of discriminatory treatment have been removed, but I regret to say that there remain a few cases of differential treatment adverse to the commerce of the United States. While none of these instances now appears to amount to undue discrimination in the sense of section 2 of the tariff law of Aug. 5, 1909, they are all exceptions to that complete degree of equality of tariff treatment that the department of state has consistently sought to obtain for American commerce abroad.

While the double tariff feature of the tariff law of 1909 has been amply justified by the results achieved in removing former and preventing new undue discriminations against American commerce, it is believed that the time has come for the amendment of this feature of the law in such way as to provide a graduated means of meeting varying degrees of discriminatory treatment of American commerce in foreign countries as well as to protect the financial interests abroad of American citizens against arbitrary and injurious treatment on the part of foreign governments through either legislative or administrative measures.

It would also seem desirable that the maximum tariff of the United States should embrace within its purview the free list, which is not the case at the present time, in order that it might have reasonable significance to the governments of those countries from which the importations into the United States are confined virtually to articles on the free list.

The fiscal year ended June 30, 1911, shows great progress in the development of American trade. It was noteworthy as marking the highest record of exports of American products to foreign countries, the valuation being in excess of $2,000,000,000. These exports showed a gain over the preceding year of more than $300,000,000.

FACILITIES FOR FOREIGN TRADE.

There is widespread appreciation expressed by the business interests of the country as regards the practical value of the facilities now offered by the department of state and the department of commerce and labor for the furtherance of American commerce. Conferences with their officers at Washington who have an expert knowledge of trade conditions in foreign countries and with consular officers and commercial agents of the department of commerce and labor who, while on leave of absence, visit the principal industrial centers of the United States, have been found of great value. These trade conferences are regarded as a particularly promising method of governmental aid in foreign trade promotion. The department of commerce and labor has arranged to give publicity to the expected arrival and the itinerary of consular officers and commercial agents while on leave in the United States, in order that trade organizations may arrange for conferences with them.

As I have indicated, it is increasingly clear that to obtain and maintain that equity and substantial equality of treatment essential to the flourishing foreign trade, which becomes year by year more important to the industrial and commercial welfare of the United States, we should have a flexibility of tariff sufficient for the give and take of negotiation by the department of state on behalf of our commerce and industry.

NEED FOR AMERICAN MERCHANT MARINE.

I need hardly reiterate the conviction that there should speedily be built up an American merchant marine. This is necessary to assure favorable transportation facilities to our great ocean borne commerce as well as to supplement the navy with an adequate reserve of ships and men. It would have the economic advantage of keeping at home part of the vast sums now paid foreign shipping for carrying American goods. All the great commercial nations pay heavy subsidies to their merchant marine, so that it is obvious that without some wise aid from the congress the United States must lag behind in the matter of merchant marine in its present anomalous position.

Legislation to facilitate the extension of American banks to foreign countries is another matter in which our foreign trade needs assistance.

CHAMBERS OF FOREIGN COMMERCE.

The interests of our foreign commerce are nonpartisan, and as a factor in prosperity are as broad as the land. In the dissemination of useful information and in the co-ordination of effort certain unofficial associations have done good work toward the promotion of foreign commerce. It is cause for regret, however, that the great number of such associations and the comparative lack of co-operation between them fails to secure an efficiency commensurate with the public interest. Through the agency of the department of commerce and labor, and in some cases directly, the department of state transmits to reputable business interests information of commercial opportunities, supplementing the regular published consular reports. Some central organization in touch with associations and chambers of commerce throughout the country and able to keep purely American interests in closer touch with different phases of commercial affairs would, I believe, be of great value. Such organization might be managed by a committee composed of a small number of those now actively carrying on the work of some of the larger associations, and there might be added to the committee, as members ex officio, one or two officials of the department of state and one or two officials from the department of commerce and labor and representatives of the appropriate committees of congress. The authority and success of such an organization would evidently be enhanced if the congress should see fit to prescribe its scope and organization through legislation which would give to it some such official standing as that, for example, of the National Red Cross.

With these factors and the continuance of the foreign service establishment (departmental, diplomatic and consular) upon the high plane where it has been placed by the recent reorganization, this government would be abreast of the times in fostering the interests of its foreign trade, and the rest must be left to the energy and enterprise of our business men.

IMPROVEMENT OF THE FOREIGN SERVICE.

The entire foreign service organization is being improved and developed with especial regard to the requirements of the commercial interests of the country. The rapid growth of our foreign trade makes it of the utmost importance that governmental agencies through which that trade is to be aided and protected should possess a high degree of efficiency. Not only should the foreign representatives be maintained upon a generous scale in so far as salaries and establishments are concerned, but the selection and advancement of officers should be definitely and permanently regulated by law so that the service shall not fail to attract men of high character and ability. The experience of the past few years with a partial application of civil service rules to the diplomatic and consular service leaves no doubt in my mind of the wisdom of a wider and more permanent extension of those principles to both branches of the foreign service. The men selected for appointment by means of the existing executive regulations have been of a far higher average of intelligence and ability than the men appointed before the regulations were promulgated. Moreover, the feeling that under the existing rules there is reasonable hope for permanence of tenure during good behavior and for promotion for meritorious service has served to bring about a zealous activity in the interests of the country, which never before existed or could exist.

It is my earnest conviction that the enactment into law of the general principles of the existing regulations cannot fail to effect further improvement in both branches of the foreign service by providing greater inducement for young men of character and ability to seek a career abroad in the service of the government, and an incentive to those already in the service to put forth greater efforts to attain the high standards which the successful conduct of our international relations and commerce requires.

I therefore again commend to the favorable action of the congress the enactment of a law applying to the diplomatic and consular service the principles embodied in section 1753 of the revised statutes of the United States, in the civil service act of Jan. 16, 1883, and the executive orders of June 27, 1906, and of Nov. 26, 1909. In its consideration of this important subject I desire to recall to the attention of the congress the very favorable report made on the Lowden bill for the improvement of the foreign service by the foreign affairs committee of the house of representatives. Available statistics show the strictness with which the merit system has been applied to the foreign service during recent years and the absolute nonpartisan selection of consuls and diplomatic service secretaries, who, indeed, far from being selected with any view to political consideration, have actually been chosen to a disproportionate extent from states which would have been unrepresented in the foreign service under the system which it is to be hoped is now permanently obsolete. Some legislation for the perpetuation of the present system of examinations and promotions upon merit and efficiency would be of greatest value to our commercial and international interests.

GOVERNMENT OF ILLINOIS.

Legislative power is vested in a general assembly, consisting of a senate and house of representatives, both elected by the people. The state is divided into fifty-one senatorial districts, each of which elects a senator and three representatives. The general assembly makes laws and appropriates money for the government of the state, elects United States senators to represent the state and in general stands in the same relation to the state as congress does to all the states as a whole. The powers and duties of the chief executive officers are as follows:

Governor—The governor is vested with the chief executive power of the state. He is the commander in chief of the military and naval forces and may call out the militia to maintain the peace. He is required to inform the general assembly, by message, of the condition of affairs of the state and to recommend needed legislation. He may, by proclamation, call a special session of the assembly or adjourn it in case of disagreement between the two houses. He has the power to appoint certain officers and during a recess of the senate may fill vacancies or remove certain officers and may call special elections to fill vacancies in certain offices. He may make requisitions upon the governors of other states for the return of fugitives from justice or offer rewards for the arrest of offenders against the laws of the state. He exercises a general supervision over the penitentiaries and may grant reprieves, commutations and pardons and may restore the rights of citizenship to ex-convicts. He may approve acts of the legislature and exercise the veto power.

Lieutenant-Governor—This officer is ex-officio president of the senate and has the power to cast the deciding vote in case of a tie. In case of the death, conviction on impeachment, failure to qualify, resignation, absence from the state or other disability on the part of the governor, the lieutenant-governor succeeds to the office to the close of the term.

Secretary of State—The secretary of state is charged with the safekeeping of the original laws and resolutions of the general assembly; with all books, bills and documents deposited with him by either house, and with all bonds, records and papers filed in his office. He keeps a record of the official acts of the governor, furnishes certified copies of the same to the assembly on request and certified copies of any of the records of his office on the payment of the statutory fees. He countersigns and affixes the seal of the state to all proclamations and commissions issued by the governor; issues licenses for incorporations and certificates of organization to cities and villages and incorporated towns. He has charge of most of the buildings and grounds belonging to the state in Springfield, furnishes supplies for the general assembly and supervises the printing and distribution of all the public documents of the state. He calls the house of representatives to order at the beginning of each general assembly and presides over the same until the election of a speaker. He is the keeper of the great seal of the state and is the custodian and sealer of weights and measures.

Auditor—The auditor is required to keep all the accounts of the state; to audit the accounts of all officers or other persons authorized to receive moneys from the state treasury; to personally sign all warrants drawn on the treasury; to institute suits wherein the state is a plaintiff, and to make a biennial report of the business of his office to the governor. With the governor and treasurer he determines the state tax rate. He exercises a general supervision over state banks, building, loan and homestead associations.

State Treasurer—The state treasurer is custodian of the revenues and public moneys of the state. He must make monthly settlements with the auditor and a biennial report to the governor.

Superintendent of Public Instruction—The superintendent exercises a general supervision over all the public schools of the state. He is the general and legal adviser of the county superintendents and must report biennially to the governor the general condition of all the schools of the state, the amount raised by taxation for school purposes and the manner of its expenditure and the general condition of all the school funds. He may grant state certificates to teachers or cause them to be withheld and must visit charitable institutions which are educational in character.

Attorney-General—It is the duty of the attorney-general to represent the state in the Supreme court in all cases in which the state is interested; to act as counsel for all state officials; to be the legal adviser of the governor and other state officers in matters relating to their official duties, and, on request, to furnish them, as well as either branch of the general assembly, with written opinions upon constitutional or legal questions.

ILLINOIS TAX COMMISSION.

Appointed by governor March 11, 1910.

John P. Wilson, Chicago; Charles E. Merriam, Chicago; Alfred M. Craig, Galesburg; Ben F. Caldwell, Springfield; Prof. David Felmley, Urbana; A. P. Grout, Winchester; B. L. Winchell, Chicago.

Duties of the commission:

1. To make a careful compilation of all state laws relating to taxation and Supreme court decisions thereon.

2. To classify and tabulate statistics relating to the totals raised by taxation in state, counties and municipalities.

3. To investigate all complaints which may be made to them of illegal, unjust or excessive taxation.

4. To secure information as to taxing methods in other states.

5. To formulate a report "which shall be as plain, concise and comprehensive as possible."

The commission met nine times and gave three public hearings, at which numerous suggestions for changes in the laws were urged. A compilation of the tax laws and judicial decisions of Illinois thereon was made by Prof. Albert M. Kales of the Northwestern university and Elmer M. Leismann and published by the commission. At its request Prof. John M. Fairlie of the University of Illinois published a descriptive and statistical report on the "Taxation and Revenue System of Illinois." The report of the commission was presented to the general assembly in January, 1911, but no action was taken by that body with reference to the recommendations made. One of these proposed the submission of an amendment to the state constitution removing from the general assembly the present restrictions in regard to the taxation of personal property. It provided that any tax levied upon personal property must be uniform as to persons and property of the same class within the jurisdiction of the body imposing the same, and that all exemptions should be by general law, revocable by the general assembly at will. The commission also recommended bills for important changes in the machinery of the tax administration, such, for example, as the establishment of a permanent state tax commisssion in place of the present state board of equalization.

REVENUE FROM THE ILLINOIS CENTRAL.

Since March 24, 1855, the Illinois Central Railroad company, in accordance with the terms of its charter, accepted March 15, 1851, has been paying into the Illinois state treasury semiannually a certain percentage of the gross receipts from its charter lines. This percentage up to 1857 was 5 and since then has been 7. The total amount paid by the road to the state up to April 30, 1911, was $30,321,894.68. The gross receipts and the semiannual payments to the state since April 30, 1905, have been:

Time.	Receipts.	Payments.
April 30, 1905	$7,635,116.74	$534,458.17

In 1905, under the administration of Gov. Charles S. Deneen, an investigation of the accuracy of the semiannual statements made by the Illinois Central Railroad company to the state of Illinois was begun and as a result a suit for an accounting was brought by the state against the corporation at the February term of the state Supreme court. It was, however, dismissed for want of jurisdiction, the state being given leave to withdraw its bill without prejudice. It was thereupon filed in the Circuit court of LaSalle county, to the June term, 1907. After various legal processes and arguments the court dismissed the bill for want of equity and from that decree the state appealed to the state Supreme court. Oct. 28, 1910, that tribunal handed down a decision reversing the decision of the Circuit court and remanding the case.

The opinion of the Supreme court, which was delivered by Chief Justice Carter, held that the accounts between the state and the railroad company prior to the year 1905, having been either expressly approved by the governor or accepted by him without objection, were closed or stated accounts which could not be opened up; that the state had no just cause for complaint on account of the diversion of traffic from charter to noncharter lines, and that interest received by the railroad company upon bank deposits and loans formed no part of the gross receipts of the charter lines upon which it must pay a percentage to the state. On the other hand the opinion sustained many of the contentions of the state. Among some of the more important of these were:

That the accounts between the state and the company are open for the years 1905, 1906, 1907, 1908 and 1909 and that the burden of proof is upon the company to show that the semiannual statements furnished to the governor since 1904 are just and true.

That in the division of earnings and payment of expenses, charter and noncharter lines must be treated as distinct and independent.

That the company must pay into the state treasury 7 per cent of the charter line receipts from interstate traffic.

That all joint earnings of charter and noncharter lines must be divided upon such an equitable basis that the state shall receive the full per centum to which it is entitled under the charter.

That where switching or drayage charges incurred by the company in Chicago are paid by the company in the performance of its duty as a common carrier, they cannot be deducted from the charter lines' gross receipts before the state's per centum is computed.

That the income derived from hotels, restaurants and dining cars is part of the gross income of the company and must be accounted for in the semiannual statements to the state.

That unlawful rebates cannot be deducted from charter line receipts, and that whenever a rebate is so deducted the burden of proving its lawfulness is upon the company.

That whenever traffic moves between points on noncharter lines south of the Ohio river and Cairo and Mounds in Illinois, the charter lines must be awarded their just proportionate share of the joint earnings.

That the railroad company is entitled to deduct a reasonable charge or bridge arbitrary for the use of the Cairo bridge, but that whenever the total amount so deducted in any one year shall exceed $180,000 (the annual rental stipulated in the company's lease) that fact shall tend to prove that the bridge arbitraries are unreasonable.

That the company must answer the seventy-four interrogatories attached to the bill and furnish to the state the information called for as to all the years since 1904.

When the time for filing a petition for a rehearing had expired, a remanding order was filed in the Circuit court of LaSalle county, Nov. 26, 1910, Attorney-General W. H. Stead entered a motion in the Circuit court of LaSalle county for a rule on the Illinois Central company to answer the amended bill of the state and the seventy-four interrogatories propounded therein. The court entered a rule and required it to answer the amended bill and the interrogatories by June 1, 1911.

Shortly prior to June 1 the attorney-general was notified by the attorneys of the company that an application would be made for a further extension of time to answer the bill and interrogatories, and on June 12 the matter of granting such further extension of time was heard before Judge Stough of the Circuit court of LaSalle county. Upon this hearing the attorneys for the company represented to Judge Stough that a force of between eighty and ninety accountants had been at work upon the books continuously since June 1, 1911, and had only been able to obtain about 10 per cent of the information essential to answer the amended bill and the seventy-four interrogatories contained therein. They further represented that they had recently increased their force, but that it would be impossible to obtain all the necessary information before Jan. 1, 1912. Judge Stough agreed with them and entered an order allowing the defendant until Jan. 1, 1912, to answer the amended bill and interrogatories, the understanding being that no further extension of time would be asked.

When the bill and interrogatories are fully answered a special master will be appointed by the court and the work of an accounting will be entered upon at once.

In his biennial message to the general assembly, Jan. 4, 1911, Gov. Deneen called attention to the fact that since the beginning of the investigation the amounts due to the state, as shown by the semiannual accounts of the Illinois Central Railroad company, had shown a marked increase and that the increase so far received greatly exceeded the total expenses so far incurred of the investigation.

As against an expenditure up to Dec. 15, 1910, of $68,709.06, the increased revenue accruing to the state as shown by the reports of the certified public accountants employed was as follows:

Proportion of freight tolls over Dubuque bridge in excess of $150,000 per annum (of which not one cent was paid into the state treasury by the railroad company prior to the six months' period ending April 30, 1906) from 1906 down to and including Oct. 31, 1910, $792,706.84, of which there has been paid into the state treasury 7 per cent, or $53,489.48.

Increased revenue from express earnings as shown by increase of receipts for:

The period ending Oct 31, 1887, over the preceding period	$70,536.50
The period ending April 30, 1892, over preceding period	71,470.12
The period ending April 30, 1896, over preceding period	150,980.60
The period ending April 30, 1901, diminished revenues over preceding period	7,682.84
The period ending Oct. 31, 1905, increase over preceding period	235,982.20
The period ending April 30, 1910, increase over preceding period	973,862.29

The largest percentage of increase prior to the period between 1905 and 1910, was 29.43 per cent. Using this as a basis of calculation, the revenue for the period between 1905 and 1910, estimated in advance, would have been $1,543,362.19, whereas it was in fact $2,011,768.85, a gain of over $468,000 on which the state treasury received an additional payment of $48,000.

Still another increase of revenue resulted from the payment into the state treasury of additional sums since the discontinuance by the railroad company of arbitrary deductions from charter line earnings on account of allowances made to the Big Muddy Coal company. These wrongful deductions, made prior to the beginning of the investigation, had amounted to $13,362.33, 7 per cent of which, or $935, was paid into the state treasury by the railroad company for the first time in April, 1907.

If, therefore, the expenses of the investigation were set off against this increase in revenue due to the investigation, the account would stand:

Amount recovered on account of Dubuque bridge tolls	$53,489.48
Increased revenue from express earnings	48,000.00
Amount recovered on account of Big Muddy Coal company	935.00
	102,424.48
From which deducting the total cost of investigation to Dec. 15, 1910	68,709.06
Leaves a net gain to the credit of the state of	33,715.42

Of the appropriation of $100,000 made to the executive department for the conduct of this investigation, there was still in the state treasury Jan. 4, 1911, an unexpended balance of $70,623.05.

COOK COUNTY FOREST PRESERVE ACT INVALID.

Under an act of the Illinois legislature, approved June 16, 1909, the following proposition was submitted to the voters of Cook county at the election of Nov. 8, 1910:

"For the adoption of an act to provide for the creation and management of forest preserve districts and repealing a certain act therein named and creating under said act a forest preserve district, the boundaries of which to coincide with and comprise the whole of the territory of Cook county, Illinois."

The proposition was approved by a majority of those voting upon it and under the provisions of the law the following were appointed to serve as the first commissioners:

Lewis Rinaker, Rep., four years; Charles H. Wacker, Dem., two years; Gustavus J. Tatge, Dem., two years; Nelson A. Cool, Rep., four years; Samuel Insull, Rep., four years.

To test the validity of the steps by which the Cook county forest preserve district was created an application for quo warranto proceedings was filed by State's Attorney Wayman in the Superior court, directed against the commissioners, whom he charged with illegally holding office. The court decided against him and the matter was then laid before the state Supreme court. That tribunal announced, June 20, 1911, that the creation of the forest preserve district was illegal on the ground that, instead of the whole of Cook county being given an opportunity to vote upon the proposition, only the voters of Chicago and Cicero were permitted to do so. The validity of the forest preserve act was not involved; it was merely the creation of the district itself which was declared void.

CHICAGO VICE COMMISSION REPORT.

The first report of the vice commission of the city of Chicago, appointed by Mayor Fred A. Busse July 5, 1910, was made to the city council April 5, 1911. The main facts set forth were these:

Chicago spends $15,000,000 anually for vice.

The traffic in women annually demands and destroys the lives and souls of 5,000 young girls.

Graft flourishes under the system that exploits vice.

"Red light districts" breed criminals and offer them havens of refuge.

Vice surrounds innocent girls who come to Chicago to earn a living with almost irresistible temptations.

Negroes are contaminated by the proximity of vice to the neighborhoods in which they live.

Oct. 26, 1910, there were in Chicago 506 places, including houses, flats and hotels, classed as evil resorts, in which 1,880 women were harbored.

The main remedies suggested by the commission were these:

State laws and city laws should be enacted making resorts public nuisances and expressly giving to any citizen the right to institute summary proceedings against them.

There should be relentless pursuit and prosecution of professional procurers.

There should be constant prosecution of all keepers and inmates of existing houses as well as owners of the property.

An identification system for women in resorts should be established by the state courts.

A law should be enacted providing a penalty for sending any messenger under 21 years of age into a disorderly house.

Protection should be given to immigrant girls arriving in Chicago.

The sale of liquor should be forbidden at public dances. Municipal dance halls should be established.

The city should acquire a farm on which a trade school and hospital can be established for unfortunate women.

For the immediate initiation of a reform policy the commission asked the council to pass two ordinances.

First—Providing for the appointment of a morals commission.

Second—Providing for the establishment of a morals court.

The president of the commission was Dean W. T. Sumner and the secretary Edwin W. Sims.

CHICAGO CHARTER MOVEMENT.

What was known as the Chicago charter convention was organized in 1905, the first session being held Dec. 12, that year. Milton J. Foreman was president, Alexander H. Revell vice-president, M. L. McKinley secretary and Henry Barrett Chamberlin assistant secretary. The convention was made up of delegates chosen by or representing the mayor, city council, governor, assembly, board of education, sanitary trustees, county board, public library board and the Chicago park boards. Its purpose was to frame a comprehensive, simple and elastic charter for the city of Chicago to be submitted to the state legislature for consideration. The work was completed and the charter taken to Springfield in the early part of 1907, where it was introduced in each house of the legislature and referred to the appropriate committees.

Some of the main features of the charter were these: Consolidation in the municipal government of Chicago of the power vested in the board of education, township, park and other local governments within the city; submission of propositions to popular vote; aldermen to be elected once in four years; the raising of adequate revenue by the issue of bonds and by other means; the power to own, maintain and operate all public utilities in the city, including intramural railroads, subways and tunnels, and telephone, telegraph, gas, electric lighting, heating, refrigerating and power plants; the parks to be under the management of a city department of parks; the public-school system to be a department of the city government and under the control of a board of education of fifteen members appointed by the mayor for terms of three years; the public library to be managed by a board of nine directors appointed by the mayor for terms of six years.

Several radical changes were made by the legislature, one of the most important being the substitution of the old primary system for the one proposed. Another was the redistricting of the city into fifty wards, one alderman to be elected from each. These and other changes aroused much opposition, but the charter was passed May 12, 1907. According to the terms of the act it was submitted to the voters of Chicago at a special election held Sept. 17, 1907, when it was defeated by a vote of 121,935 nays to 59,786 yeas.

Early in 1909 the charter convention resumed work and prepared eleven bills for submission to the legislature, in the hope that some at least might be enacted into law. These separate bills included the principal points in the charter defeated by the referendum vote of 1907.

The charter bills encountered opposition from the start, not only from the senators and assemblymen representing districts outside of Chicago, but also from some of the city members, and, while favorable action was taken in committee and also in each house on the consolidation measure and on one or two of the other propositions, no legislation was secured and the work of the convention again went for nothing.

The Chicago public library is a free public institution, established under the Illinois library law of 1872. It derives its revenue from an annual library tax of approximately four-tenths of a mill. A board of directors of nine members is appointed by the mayor, three annually for terms of three years. The library occupies the site formerly known as Dearborn park, bounded by Michigan avenue, Washington street, Garland court and Randolph street. The cost of the building was about $2,000,000, including the furniture, book stacks and machinery.

The right of drawing books from the public library belongs to all who reside in the city of Chicago, and also to those who make their homes in the suburbs within the limits of Cook county and are regularly employed in the city. In order to become a book borrower it is necessary only to file an application giving the name and residence of the applicant and bearing the signature of a second person, who must be an actual resident of the city, appearing as such in the latest city directory. This person becomes the guarantor to the library for the proper observance of the library regulations on the part of the applicant. These regulations merely provide that books drawn for home use must be returned within the stated period and must not be defaced or injured.

At the close of May 31, 1911, the public library contained 448,073 volumes. The aggregate circulation for the year ending May 31, 1911, was 2,256,022 volumes, which does not include the use of books kept on the open shelves at the main library or its branches or the periodicals or newspapers used in the reading rooms. This use would bring the total book issues to 2,882,773.

The Field museum of natural history, established in 1894 at the close of the World's Columbian exposition of 1893, occupies the temporary building erected for fine arts in Jackson park, the exposition site. The founding of a scientific institution of this character in Chicago was made possible by the gift of $1,000,000 by Marshall Field, who on his death (Jan. 16, 1906) bequeathed the institution a further $8,000,000, $4,000,000 for the erection of a permanent building and $4,000,000 for endowment. In addition $500,000 has been donated by other individuals and there is an annual income from other sources than endowment of about $25,000. The citizens of Chicago have confirmed legislative provision for the levy of a tax for the maintenance of the museum when a new building shall have been erected, which it is estimated will eventually produce approximately $100,000 per annum.

The nucleus of the exhibition material was gathered by gift and purchase at the World's Columbian exposition. Most of this material, however, has since been rearranged, readapted or discarded. Several departments created at the organization have been abandoned, until, after the lapse of eleven years and the expenditure of over $2,000,000, the museum is now divided into four departments—namely, anthropology, botany, geology and zoology. Many expeditions for the purpose of obtaining study, exhibition and exchange material and data have been dispatched to all parts of North America and to different countries. The results of these expeditions, investigations and researches have been published by the museum from time to time, which publications have been distributed to kindred societies and institutions both at home and abroad. Two courses of free lectures are given annually. The museum has a working library of about 53,000 titles, an extensive exchange system, fully equipped departmental laboratories, a herbarium of 260,000 sheets, study collections in mammals and birds reaching many thousand specimens, a large two-story taxidermy section, a well-equipped printing shop, illustration studios and assaying and lapidary rooms. In North American ethnology, in the world's mineralogy, in economic botany the museum is particularly prominent, while its series of mounted mammals furnish examples of advanced museum methods. The present main building covers nine acres and is open to the public on all days except Christmas and Thanksgiving. An admission fee of 25 cents is charged except on Saturdays and Sundays, when admission is free to all. Students, scholars and teachers are admitted free on all days between 9 a. m. and 4 p. m.

The museum is incorporated under state law and the administrative control rests in a board of trustees with president, secretary, etc. The executive of the museum is the director, under whom there are four head curators with divisional assistant curators, preparators, etc. The entire museum records, the accessions system, the historical files, publications and supplies are in charge of a recorder.

THE BEATTIE MURDER CASE.

Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., a young man of good family, shot and killed his wife, Louise, on the night of July 18, 1911, while they were out in an automobile five miles from Richmond, Va. He claimed that the shot had been fired by a highwayman, but was arrested after the inquest and held for murder. His trial began Aug. 19 at Chesterfield, Va., and attracted wide attention. He steadily maintained that he was innocent, but the jury brought in a verdict Sept. 8, finding him guilty. He was electrocuted in the penitentiary at Richmond Nov. 24, after having confessed in the presence of three clergymen that he was guilty of the crime for which he had been sentenced to death.

CHICAGO STREET GRADES.

The grade of the streets in the central portion of Chicago has been raised three times. In 1855 it was raised from 2½ to 8 feet above the then existing surface, and it was again raised by about the same amount in 1857 and 1872, making the present level fourteen feet above "city datum," which is the low-water mark of the lake in 1847.

CHICAGO SCHOOL CENSUS OF MAY 2, 1910.

Taken under the supervision of W. L. Bodine for the board of education.

ADULT POPULATION.

Owing to the fact that 1910 was the year of the decennial census of the United States taken by the government, the board of education did not take a count of the inhabitants 21 years of age and over. The supervisor of the school census, however, estimated the total population of the city at 2,100,000, exclusive of the large number of people living in the suburbs. He arrived at this result by making deductions for deaths and using a multiple of a trifle over 2½ applied to the minor population of 814,115 to include all the inhabitants, plus 1 per cent of the total population of 1908 for possible skips.

HOUSE-NUMBER SYSTEM IN CHICAGO.

[From report of John D. Riley, superintendent of maps.]

Sept. 20, 1910, the city council passed an amendment to the house number ordinance (of Sept. 1, 1909), the effect of which was to include the downtown district in the new system of numbers, making the same complete for the entire city, the change becoming effective, so far as the downtown district was concerned, April 1, 1911.

The system is laid out on two base lines, State street dividing the east and west streets and Madison street dividing the north and south streets, the numbers being assigned on the basis of 800 numbers to each mile or 100 numbers to the prevailing city block of 660 feet or one-eighth of a mile. An exception to this assignment, however, is made on the north and south streets between Madison street and 31st street, in which territory 1,200 numbers are assigned between Madison and 12th streets, 1,000 between 12th and 22d streets and 900 between 22d and 31st streets. This was necessitated by reason of the fact that it was not deemed expedient or advisable to interfere with the system of numbered streets on the south side.

The system further provides for the use of the prefixes "North," "South," "East" and "West" on all streets which either cross or are open on either side of the base lines and on all streets of numerical nomenclature, whether open on either side of the base line or not. Names of streets open only on one side of either of the base lines do not carry the prefix, the result of this being that all of the east and west streets north of North avenue, at about which point the line of State street runs into Lake Michigan, do not require the use of the prefix "West." This, of course, also applies to such streets as Plymouth court, Polk street and all other named streets open on only one side of either of the base lines.

In the assignment of numbers in the downtown district it was not possible to have 100 numbers to each block by reason of the fact that the blocks, instead of being laid out on the basis of one-eighth of a mile or 660 feet long, are approximately only 400 feet. The assignment, however, was made in as systematic a manner as possible. On the east and west streets downtown, commencing at State street and running west, we get numbers 1 and 2 at State, 50 Dearborn, 100 Clark, 150 LaSalle, 200 5th avenue, 300 Franklin, 350 Market, the terminating numbers at the river picking up those heretofore assigned on the same streets west of the river. On the east and west streets running east of State street we get numbers 1 and 2 at State, 50 at Wabash, the terminating numbers at the west side of Michigan avenue being something less than 100. On the north and south streets, going north from Madison street, we get 1 and 2 at Madison, 100 Washington, 150 Randolph, 200 Lake and 300 South Water street, the terminating numbers at the river picking up with those heretofore assigned to the same streets north of the river. Going south from Madison street on the north and south streets we commence with 1 and 2 at Madison street, 100 Monroe, 200 Adams, 300 Jackson, 400 Van Buren, 500 Congress, 800 Polk, 1000 Taylor and 1200 12th street, all of those numbers being in conformity with those for the same streets as heretofore assigned west of the river. In the business district downtown an individual number is assigned to each entrance on the street level.

GREENEBAUM SONS BANK AND TRUST COMPANY

Corner Clark and Randolph Streets Chicago

A lifetime of success has placed the banking house of Greenebaum Sons Bank and Trust Comany in the forefront of Chicago monetary institutions. Founded in 1855 by Elias Greenebaum, three generations have contributed to the growth and solidity of the business, and to-day no institution in the banking world is more highly regarded.

From 1877 to 1911 the business founded by Elias Greenebaum was known under the name of Greenebaum Sons, Bankers, and when the grandsons of the man who laid the broad foundations of the structure were ready to take their places in the management of the great banking and investment business, which had expanded to such large proportions, it was reorganized as a state bank and trust company, with a capital of $1.500,000, in 1911.

Conducting, as it does, a banking department, mortgage loan department, investment, foreign and trust departments, it is adequately equipped to supply the Chicago business world with financial assistance in any of the varied lines specified.

Recognized as the banking house best able to handle large or small first mortgage bond issues, it has proved its supremacy in the matter of the bonds for the Chicago central business buildings now under construction. Among the issues recently taken by Greenebaum Sons Bank and Trust Company may be mentioned the bonds of the great new Hearst Building, that modern, high-class, all-steel skyscraper built as the new home for the Chicago Examiner and the American; the new Rothschild State Street Building, the Rogers & Hall Building, Franklin Building, the Kiper Buildings, and various office, warehouse and manufacturing buildings have been negotiated through this bank.

These First Mortgage Real Estate Bonds were issued in units of $1,000 and $500, bearing 5½% to 6% interest, and were all quickly bought by the large number of investment clients who place their funds through Greenebaum Sons.

At the same time it maintains a department for loans on improved real estate and building loans on moderate sized residences, flats and business buildings.

The banking departments are similar to those in any well-equipped institution in a metropolitan city and transact a general banking business.

City Hall Square Building

LOCATION

This building occupies the premises, new numbers 127 to 139 North Clark Street. The location, in the heart of the Loop, makes office space unusually desirable for Lawyers, Builders, Contractors, Architects, Financial and Bonding Companies, Building Material Firms, etc.

CONSTRUCTION

This building is a thoroughly modern twenty-one story, fire-proof office building and will be ready for occupancy on or before the first of April, 1912. The building has a frontage of one hundred and eleven feet on Clark Street and a depth of seventy feet on Court Place, with an open light court in the rear one hundred and eleven feet wide and ninety feet deep. Every office is an outside room with plenty of sunshine and light. The exterior of the first four floors is polished granite and Bedford stone, the stonework treated in a decorative manner. Above the stonework the main shaft of the building is a specially selected vitrified red brick. The upper four stories are ornamented terra cotta. The lobby has Italian marble wainscoting and floor, bordered in Verde Antique marble. Corridors and stairways above the first floor are wainscoted in Italian marble with floors of Italian marble. Finish is highly polished San Domingo mahogany throughout.

ELEVATORS

There are five unusually large latest improved type of Otis elevators with a speed of 600 feet per minute, equipped with all the modern safety devices and electric signals, insuring quick and reliable service at all times.

EQUIPMENT

A thoroughly modern system of steam vacuum heating with thermostat regulation is installed. Particular attention is paid to ventilation and sanitation and a vacuum system is utilized for cleaning. Hot and cold water is furnished to every office in the building. Commodious and well-appointed lavatory and barber shop are located on the eleventh floor. Retiring-room with toilet and rest-room, suitably furnished for ladies, are provided on the twelfth floor.

The most efficient service will be maintained in all departments, and every means for the comfort, convenience and accommodation of the tenants will be adopted.

The building has been erected under the personal supervision of the Architect, Mr. C. A. Eckstorm.

On the 15th of December, 1911, approximately 60 per cent of the office space was leased.

The Art Institute of Chicago was incorporated May 24, 1879, for the "founding and maintenance of schools of art and design, the formation and exhibition of collections of objects of art and the cultivation and extension of the arts of design by any appropriate means." The museum building upon the lake front, first occupied in 1893, has never been closed for a day. It is open to the public every week day from 9 to 5, Sundays from 1 to 5. Admission is free to members and their families at all times, and free to all upon Wednesdays, Saturdays, Sundays and legal holidays. Upon other days the entrance fee is 25 cents.

All friends of art are invited to become members. Annual members pay a fee of $10 a year. Life members pay $100 and are thenceforth exempt from dues. Governing members pay $100 upon election and $25 a year thereafter. Upon the payment of $400 governing members become governing life members and are thenceforth exempt from dues. All receipts from life memberships are invested and the income only expended. All members are entitled, with their families and visiting friends, to admission to all exhibitions, receptions, public lectures and entertainments given by the Art institute and to the use of the Ryerson reference library upon art.

MUSEUM.

The Art museum now ranks among the first three or four in the country. It contains excellent examples of the old masters and of the modern painters. There is also a large and comprehensive collection of sculptures, including reproductions of the work of the greatest sculptors, ancient and modern. There is an extensive collection of architectural casts. Other fields of art are represented by collections of etchings, engravings, textiles, oriental art, Egyptian and classical antiquities, etc. There is a constant succession of passing exhibitions, thirty or more in a year. All students enjoy the full use of the collections and the library.

The number of visitors to the art gallery during the year ending June 1, 1911, was 704,239.

The school of instruction in the practice and theory of art includes departments of painting, sculpture, decorative designing, illustration, architecture and normal instruction. There are day and evening classes for beginners and for advanced pupils and special classes on Saturdays. The instructors number about 80 and the pupils average about 3,000 a year. The principle upon which the school is founded is to maintain in the highest efficiency the severe practice of academic drawing and painting, from life, from the antique and from objects, and around this practice, as a living stem, to group the various departments of art education.

The school is conducted upon the most modern methods and has grown to be the most comprehensive and probably the largest fine arts school in the United States. Constant communication and interchange are kept up with European art centers and distinguished teachers from a distance are called in from time to time. Students may enter at any time. The tuition rates are as follows:

AMERICAN FENCE

Square Mesh Hinged Joints (patented), with Flexible Stays

A square mesh fence of weight, great strength and durability. Large wires in both the horizontals and the uprights, and the whole fabric woven together with the American hinged joint (patented), making the most substantial and flexible union mechanically possible. Both wires are positively locked and firmly held against side slip and yet are free to act like a hinge in yielding to pressure and returning quickly to place without bending or injuring the metal. Many years of the hardest usage in the field have demonstrated the value of the American forms of construction, justly entitling it to be called a resilient wall of steel, solid and enduring.

ELLWOOD FENCE

Diamond Mesh, Elastic Cables

The steel in Ellwood fence is especially made for the purpose from carefully selected stock; it is hard, elastic, tough and springy. The line wires, composed of two or more wires twisted into cables, give each individual wire the shape of an elongated coiled spring. The fence is therefore sufficiently elastic to take care of expansion and contraction, and yet so rigid when properly stretched as to prevent sagging. The small and permanent mesh is made by weaving one continuous wire throughout the fabric. The mesh or stay wires are so interwoven that slipping is impossible. The triangular truss is the strongest form of contruction known; for this reason, Ellwood fence will stand the hardest usage and still retain its shape.

ROYAL FENCE

Square Mesh, Continuous Stays, with Royal Loop

Is made of heavy, hard, stiff steel wire, the strongest and best possible to produce for fencing purposes. The stay or upright wires are continuous from top to bottom of the fence and secured to the horizontal wires by the Royal loop. Being wrapped around the horizontal wires entirely within the tension curves, the stays are rigidly held in place and side slipping prevented. The whole forms a fabric of the greatest strength and ample flexibility, the best of the continuous stay fences.

ANTHONY FENCE

Square Mesh, Rigid Stays, with Anthony Knot

The upright and horizontal wires are tied with the famous Anthony knot, the smallest fence knot made. Machinery of special design has been brought to such a degree of perfection that the most nicely balanced woven wire fabric is produced, each wire drawing with mathematical precision under equal tension and uniformly even with the others. This brings into play, under stress of action, all the wires within a considerable radius of the center of contact, affording to an extraordinary degree great resistance combined with flexibility.

The valuation since 1875 is the equalized valuation fixed by the state board of equalization. From 1867 to 1875 the valuation was made by the city for the city tax. From 1898 to 1908, inclusive, the assessed value was one-fifth of the actual value. In 1909 the rate was fixed at one-third. The amounts in the personal property column include the railroad valuation. The separate figures in 1911 were: Personal property, $196,967,023; railroads, $17,305,282.

TAXING BODIES IN CHICAGO.

1. STATE TAX—For state purposes. The governor, auditor and treasurer constitute the board which ascertains the rate per cent required to produce the amount of taxes levied by the general assembly. The "state school tax" is levied in the same manner.
2. COUNTY TAX—The county board levies the taxes for all county purposes.
3. CITY TAX—The city council, acting with the mayor, levies the taxes for all city purposes.
4. SCHOOL TAX—The city council and the mayor make a separate levy for this purpose.
5. LIBRARY TAX—The city council and the mayor make a separate levy for this purpose.
6. SANITARY DISTRICT—The tax is levied by the board of trustees.
7. SOUTH PARK SYSTEM—The south park commissioners levy for park purposes in the towns of South Chicago, Hyde Park and Lake.
8. WEST PARK SYSTEM—The West Chicago park commissioners levy for park purposes in the town of West Chicago.
9. LINCOLN PARK—The Lincoln park commissioners are not "corporate authorities," the Lincoln park act not having been adopted by popular vote. The levy for Lincoln park is made by the county treasurer, acting as ex officio supervisor.
10. RIDGE PARK—A small park district in Rogers Park, organized under the law providing for local park districts by popular vote. The board of five commissioners levies for the district.
11. THE NORTH SHORE PARK DISTRICT—Organized the same as Ridge Park.

By an act of the legislature approved May 11, 1901, and by the vote of the people at the spring election in 1902 the townships lying within the limits of Chicago were consolidated and the powers of the town boards transferred to the city council. This reduced the taxing boards in Chicago from eighteen to eleven as above.

CHICAGO STOCK YARDS FIRE CALAMITY.

Twenty-four men were crushed to death under a falling wall at a fire in Morris & Co.'s meat storage house in the Union stockyards, Chicago, early on the morning of Dec. 22, 1910. The victims included Fire Marshal James Horan Second Assistant Fire Marshal William J. Burroughs, twenty other city firemen, a private fireman and a railway clerk. The fire started at 4:09 a. m. from some unknown cause and was followed soon afterward by an explosion, resulting, it is supposed, from hot air expansion. A part of the east wall was blown out, the brick and beams falling upon and smashing a canopy covering a loading platform. The chief and his men were at work on the platform, trying to get at the fire, which was in the basement, when the crash came. They were caught as in a trap and all were killed, probably instantly. It took many hours of hard work to recover their bodies. The money loss caused by the fire was $750,000.

Following is a list of the men killed:

Horan, James, chief fire marshal, 722 South Ashland avenue.

Burroughs, William J., second assistant fire marshal, 4019 Michigan avenue.

Schonsett, Edward D., truckman truck company No. 11, 3558 Princeton avenue.

Sturm, William G., lieutenant engine company No. 64, 6218 South Laflin street.

Walters, Frank, pipeman engine company No. 59, 311 West 26th street.

Weber, William F., driver engine company No. 59, 7224 South Morgan street.

For the relief of the widows, children and other dependent relatives of the victims of the fire a fund of $211,000 was raised by popular subscription and placed in the hands of a citizens' relief committee headed by Harlow N. Higinbotham. The committee desired to invest the money so as to provide an income for the children during their minority, but suit was brought on behalf of the beneficiaries and Judge W. F. Cooper of the Superior court decided Aug. 25, 1911, that the fund should be distributed at once. Chief Horan's widow was to receive $17,000, Assistant Chief Burroughs' widow $11,536 and the others sums ranging from $1,000 to $5,253 each. The money was distributed in December.

SOUTH SIDE ELEVATED RAILROAD.

All the main points of interest on the south side are reached by the various branches of the South Side Elevated Railroad.

The main line runs south just east of State street, to 40th street, and between Prairie and Calumet avenues from 40th street to 63d street, and east along 63d street to Jackson park.

The Englewood branch leaves the main line at 59th street, running west to 63d street and Loomis boulevard.

The Normal Park branch leaves the Englewood division at 63d street and Stewart avenue, running southerly and westerly to 69th street and Normal avenue.

From 40th street and Indiana avenue the Kenwood branch extends to the east, with a terminus at East 42d street and the lake.

Indiana avenue and 40th street is also the junction of the stockyards branch extending to the west. This line crosses Halsted street and forms a loop in the heart if the stockyards. A panoramic view of the yards can be had from the windows of the trains that cannot be had in any other manner.

An excellent express service is afforded by reason of a third track for the exclusive use of express trains, extending from 43d street to 12th street. Along this track trains are whirled at full speed for over four miles without a stop, fully protected by the latest type of block signals and interlocking plants, equipped with safety devices.

All possible precautions are taken to make the South Side Elevated Railroad safe, comfortable and rapid, with frequent service, and clean, well heated cars, elevated above the dust and mud of the city, and it is therefore the most popular of any means of transportation on the south side.

THE METROPOLITAN WEST SIDE ELEVATED RAILWAY

The Metropolitan West Side Elevated Railway, through its industrial department, has been instrumental in locating numerous large and small industries outside the loop and near the outskirts of the city.

These industries also have the best of steam road facilities by reason of their location being upon the Chicago & Western Indiana-Belt, Baltimore & Ohio, Chicago Terminal, and the Chicago Burlington & Quincy railroads.

All four branches operate over the main line around the Union Loop during the entire twenty-four hours of the day.

The main line parallels Van Buren street from the loop to Marshfield avenue.

Garfield Park branch leaves the main line at Marshfield avenue and parallels Van Buren street to 52d avenue, then on the surface through Austin, Oak Park and Forest Park (Harlem).

Douglas Park branch leaves the main line at Marshfield avenue, thence southerly and westerly to 21st street and 43d avenue, thence on the surface to 52d avenue and 22d street.

The Logan Square branch leaves the main line at Marshfield avenue and runs northerly and northwesterly to Robey street and Milwaukee avenue and then parallel to Milwaukee avenue to Logan Square.

The Humboldt Park branch extends west from Robey street and Milwaukee avenue, paralleling North avenue, passing Humboldt park and Humboldt boulevard, to Lawndale avenue.

The running time from the terminus of the three branches to the loop is about twenty-seven minutes.

The company has built a large terminal station on 5th avenue, between Jackson and Van Buren street. Into and out of this terminal station during the morning and evening rush a regular service is maintained on all the branches of the Metrpolitan system.

This station is also used as the Chicago terminal of the Aurora, Elgin & Chicago Railway, which taps the Fox river valley.

NORTHWESTERN ELEVATED RAILROAD.

The Northwestern Elevated railroad is the four track route of the Chicago Elevated railroads. It also maintains an express service, both day and night, over its lines.

The Main Line leaves the loop at 5th avenue and Lake street and runs northerly over Wells street bridge and along Franklin street to Chicago avenue, thence northerly and westerly over its own right of way to Wilson and Evanston avenues, the terminus of the Main Line.

The Evanston Division commences at Wilson avenue and runs down upon the surface through Edgewater and Rogers Park, passing Calvary Cemetery just beyond the City Limits, and runs through Evanston to a short distance from its northern limits.

At Central street, the northern terminus, connection is made with the Chicago & Milwaukee Electric Railroad for all cities and towns along Lake Michigan as far as Milwaukee.

The running time af express trains from Central street station to the Loop is 42 minutes.

The Ravenswood Division runs westerly and northerly from Belmont avenue station to Lawrence and Kimball avenues in West Ravenswood.

The running time of express trains from the terminus of the Ravenswood Division to the Union Loop is 33 minutes.

THE CHICAGO AND OAK PARK ELEVATED RAILROAD

The Chicago and Oak Park Elevated Railroad runs west on Lake street through Austin and Oak Park.

It is three track route west from Rockwell street to 52d avenue, a distance of three and one-half miles, which permits of express service during the rush hour periods of the morning and evening.

A branch running south on the surface in Oak Park from the Main Line to Harrison street taps the territory of the Metropolitan Elevated in South Oak Park.

The Chicago and Oak Park line makes direct connection with the Suburban Electric Railway to Riverside, Brookfield and LaGrange, at 52d avenue and Lake street.

CHICAGO INTERURBAN TROLLEY LINES.

Following are the principal electric interurban lines with terminals in or near Chicago, with the names of the principal points reached by them:

Chicago & Milwaukee—Terminal in Evanston; makes connection with Northwestern elevated and surface lines to Chicago; runs north to Waukegan, Kenosha, Racine and Milwaukee; branch from Lake Bluff to Libertyville and Rockefeller. Electric lines run from Milwaukee to Burlington, to East Troy, to Waukesha, Pewaukee, Oconomowoc and Watertown and to Sheboygan and Elkhart lake.

Chicago & Joliet—Terminal at 48th street and Archer avenue; runs southwest to Lockport and Joliet; connects at Joliet with lines for Aurora and Chicago Heights.

Interurban Electric Lines Radiating from Chicago.

At Elgin connection is made with a line running to Belvidere and Rockford and from the latter place a line runs west to Freeport and another north to Beloit and Janesville. The Aurora, Elgin & Chicago road is operated on the third-rail system.

The Keeley Institute

The Keeley treatment, or, as it has been named by the public, "The Keeley Cure," has now been in continuous and successful administration for more than thirty years. Doctor Keeley began treating patients in Dwight in the early seventies in connection with his practice, but later in 1880 he abandoned general practice and devoted himself exclusively to the treatment of drunkenness, drug and narcotic addictions. The first Keeley Institute was in a modest one-story wooden building in Dwight, whereas at the present day the Keeley Institute is housed in the establishment an illustration of which is seen above. These buildings are fireproof and equipped with every modern convenience. The Livingston Hotel, where the Keeley patients board, is first class in every particular and enjoys the distinction of being the best in the State of Illinois outside of Chicago.

The growth of the Keeley Institute system is not represented merely by this growth at Dwight. The business has spread now until there is a Keeley Institute in nearly every state in the Union and some have more than one. Besides these there has been one in successful operation in England for the past twenty years and there are two in Canada.

The Keeley system of treatment involves no confinement nor restraint. Patients are looked after carefully in order to see that medicines are taken with the utmost regularity and this is accomplished in such a manner as not to irritate or annoy the patient. Liquor and drugs are not discontinued abruptly, but their use is permitted in connection with the Keeley treatment until such time as patients can get along comfortably without these things.

Sometimes a mistaken impression prevails that the Keeley treatment accomplishes its work by nauseating patients and creating a disgust for liquor. Nothing can be farther from the truth. There is no nausea nor other sickness caused by or attendant upon the Keeley treatment. Common sense would indicate that an alleged cure obtained in such a manner is a fraud and would last no longer than the deception would continue. It is easy to nauseate a patient and persuade him that he cannot drink liquor, but this impression does not last because he soon finds out that he can. Nothing of this kind is practiced at Dwight. Cures are accomplished by building up and strengthening the nervous system and restoring it to its original unpoisoned condition so that liquor and drugs are no longer necessary for the patient's comfort and convenience.

The Keeley treatment has received endorsements from a great many corporations, firms and individuals and in addition to that it has been administered in the Soldiers' Homes with marvelous success as well as in the regular army. The treatment has also been administered to patients taken from workhouses and such an experiment tried at Minneapolis resulted in proving what an economic advantage it would be to cure drunkards rather than confine them.

The work of the Keeley Institute was looked at askance in the beginning by physicians who had learned to distrust specifics and so-called "cures." They have realized, however, that no medical fraud can possibly survive as long as the Keeley treatment has; hence a large proportion of the patients received now are sent by physicians. The work of the Keeley Institute can be summarized very briefly and truthfully by saying that with the aid of the Keeley treatment the inebriate who desires to do so can get along comfortably without liquor or drugs for the remainder of his life.

It should be borne in mind that every establishment where they claim to treat drunkenness and drug addictions is not a Keeley Institute, whatever may be claimed for them by other people. The Keeley treatment is administered only in establishments known by the uniform name "The Keeley Institute." We have nothing to say in relation to other establishments, but those desiring to take the Keeley treatment should bear this fact in mind. This has sometimes been a great injustice to us to have to bear the blame for something of which we know nothing.

Patients at the Keeley Institutes are allowed the utmost freedom not only as regards going about the village, walking, exercising, etc., but their friends are permitted to visit them every day in the week if desired. All correspondence is strictly confidential.

Any subscriber in any such exchange may communicate with any telephone within the city limits outside the neighborhood district, for which a charge of 5 cents may be made for each period of 5 minutes or fraction thereof. The rates per month for local exchange service, including all outgoing messages under yearly contracts, shall not exceed the following:

Line.	Business.	Residence.
One-party	$4.00	$3.00
Two-party	3.00	2.00
Four-party	2.00	1.50

TOLL SERVICE.

The company shall not charge more than 10 cents for each conversation or message up to three minutes (and not more than 5 cents for each additional minute), transmitted from any telephone in Chicago to any other telephone outside the city but within fifteen miles of the present city hall, or within one mile of the city limits and within the state of Illinois.

METERS.

The company shall install in connection with each measured-service line of its subscribers a meter which shall prove effective in actual use for accurately recording the number of outgoing messages over the line.

COMISKEY'S NEW HOME FOR THE WHITE SOX.

COMISKEY PARK

HOME OF THE

"WHITE SOX"

The new ball grounds of the Chicago American league baseball club are located on 35th street between Wentworth and Shields avenues, and contain close to fourteen acres, making one of the largest fields devoted to baseball in the United States.

The new grand stand is one of the finest in the country and close to 35,000 persons are able to find seats in the stands and bleachers. The grand stand alone will seat 15,000 and boxes 6,000.

Twelve hundred tons of steel were used in the construction of the plant, which is re-enforced with concrete.

Every modern device in the construction of baseball plants is installed in the plant, and clubhouses for home and visiting teams are fitted out with all the luxuries that money can buy. Spacious offices for President C. A. Comiskey and the other officials of the club are arranged at the grounds and provision is made for taking care of automobiles in an up-to-date garage.

VALUE OF WATERWORKS PROPERTY.

The total appraised value of the Chicago waterworks property Dec. 31, 1910, was $46,534,250.87, divided as follows: Real estate, $4,064,296; buildings, $2,499,226.16; equipment, $2,602,672.88; cribs, tunnels, mains, etc., $37,348,055.83.

CHICAGO'S BRIDGE SYSTEM.

The first ferry across the river was established in 1829, where the Lake street bridge now is. In 1833 a floating bridge of logs was in operation just north of the present Randolph street bridge. A foot bridge over the north branch was built in 1832 at Kinzie street. The first drawbridge over the main branch of the river was placed at Dearborn street in 1834. In 1854 a pivot bridge was built at Clark street. These and other bridges of that time were built by the persons most directly benefited by them. It was not until 1857 that a bridge was built entirely at the city's expense. This was the structure over the south branch at Madison street. It cost $30,000. Until 1872 the swing bridges were turned by hand, but in the year named steam power was installed on the Dearborn street structure and later on most of the other bridges in the downtown section were similarly equipped. In 1895 the Rush, Lake and Van Buren street bridges were operated by electric motors. The last named structure, which was opened for traffic in that year, was the first of the Scherzer rolling type. The Halsted street lift bridge, the first and only one of its kind, was opened in 1894 and was operated by steam. It cost the city $242,880.

There are at the present time in Chicago ninety bridges over the river, of which sixty-eight are maintained by the city and twenty-two by railroad companies. Of those operated by the city thirty-four are movable and the others fixed. Thirty-four of the movable bridges are operated by electricity, one by steam and fourteen by hand power. Twenty-four are bascule bridges of various types, one is a vertical lift bridge and twenty are swing bridges.

FARM POWER.

By L. W. Chase, Professor of Agricultural Engineering, University of Nebraska.

Most farmers have learned that a gasoline engine is an automatic machine when properly handled. If the farmer himself does not know that a four-cycle engine requires a suction stroke, a compression stroke, an expansion stroke, and an exhaust or clearance stroke, before the cycle of gases is complete, his son is quite apt to, so what is the difference?—it is all in the family. This same son knows that the charge which is drawn into the engine must be of the proper mixture, he knows that the charge must be compressed to the proper number of pounds per square inch or it will not explode. He knows that ignition must take place a certain distance before the piston reaches dead center in order to get the proper power from the charge, and he knows that the burnt charge must be removed from the cylinder before a new charge is taken in. These four fundamentals of a gasoline engine he knows, and he also knows that if any one of these is off the engine will not run.

NOT DANGEROUS.

Some say that gasoline engines are dangerous because they will explode. This is an erroneous idea. Gasoline engines do explode, or at least should explode about 150 to 300 times per minute, and there has been far more trouble caused because they do not explode than because they do explode. Gasoline itself will not explode. If you do not believe it, fill a bottle full of the liquid and hold a match to it. You do not need to scringe or blink; it will do nothing but slowly burn, throwing off a yellowish blue flame. It is not the gasoline which explodes and does harm, but it is the gasoline vapors which have escaped into the open air that explode. Take a pint fruit jar and drop about ten drops of gasoline into it. Stir the air up within the jar, then turn the jar over and hold a match to the mouth. A small explosion occurs—and this is what happens every time a charge of gas explodes in the engine, and also every time gasoline vapors are ignited in a room. Roughly it takes 1,700 to 2,000 times its own volume of air mixed with gasoline to make it explode. Try exploding the charge of gasoline vapor in the fruit jar once more, but this time put in about twenty-five drops of gasoline instead of ten. It doesn't explode—simply burns with a slow flame as long as the jar is turned over. Set the jar up straight and the flame dies out. The second charge did not explode because there was too much gasoline in the jar to unite with the air in a proportion which would make an explosion.

Apply the above principle to a gasoline engine and you will have the cause of 50 per cent of the troubles of the amateur. He floods his engine, and after working over it for an hour or so trying to start it, goes away in disgust. Perhaps in an hour or so some one gives it a try and it starts right off. The reason for this is that the first man flooded the engine and kept on flooding it. But when he left the engine the vapors within the cylinders deteriorated. So when the next man came along the mixture of gasoline and air was of such consistency that the engine started at once.

It is always better to have the needle valve open too small a distance than too large a distance. If the engine does not start the first time close the needle valve, hold open the inlet valve, and turn the wheels around a time or two. This will clear the cylinder of the previous unburnt charge so that the try can be made again without danger of flooding.

IGNITION.

The ignitor of a gasoline engine is a simple affair when one understands its principle.

If a nonconductor gets between the points of the ignitor a spark is not made, and if a conductor gets across the points a spark is also not made, hence it is absolutely essential that the ignitor and all binding posts be kept clean, and the latter must be kept tight.

Since gasoline gas does not burn instantly, ignition should take place some time before the piston reaches dead center. A slow speed engine should ignite when the crank is about 10 degrees below center, while some extremely high speed engines should ignite about 70 degrees below or before dead center.

The farmer who knows the principle of the action of the gases in his engine and understands his ignitor will have no trouble other than those which come up because of wear and poor adjustment or lack of care, and these troubles he must learn to adjust as they come about.

The following table shows about the amount of gasoline required when using a 3 horse power gasoline engine for the work about the farm. Some of the figures are from actual tests and some are computations:

One gallon of gasoline will pump
2,454 gallons of water from well 43 feet deep.
1,720 gallons of water from well 158 feet deep.
Will shell 262 bushels of corn.
Will grind 48.6 bushels of corn.
Will separate the milk from 300 cows.
Will do about 20 weekly washings without wringing.
Will grind about 20 sickles, and, if harvester is pulled by horses, will cut about 4 acres of grain.

The limit of usefulness of a gasoline engine on a farm depends upon the ingenuity of the farmer.

Besides the subjects mentioned, it should be made to cut the ice, put the ice in the ice-house, the hay in the barn, the corn in the crib, cut the alfalfa, the ensilage, do the threshing, sharpen the plows and the disks, sweep the floors of the house, saw the wood, light the buildings, and do many other kinds of work.

SIZE OF ENGINE.

What size of engine to purchase depends entirely upon the farm and farmer. On the whole, it seems that most farmers are purchasing too small an engine, and overlooking the medium sizes. A good 4 or 5 horse power engine will do anything on the farm, except thresh or fill the silo, and do it as economically as a large engine which would require a large force to keep it supplied with work. This same engine will do all the small work about the farm, and requires only a trifle more gasoline for the work than a 1 or 2 horse power engine.

With modern machines and a good gasoline engine a farmer should use his mental ability in such a way that he and his farm hand can do all his work, and then thereby drop the old time shelling bee and threshing day. By stacking the grain and using a small separator, a farmer can choose his own time to thresh, and by that means keep a good hand who would otherwise be lost. This method of doing the work will also take a burden from his wife's shoulders, because she will not need to cook for such a large number of extra men as is usual at threshing time. Whenever a farmer gets a gasoline engine he should arrange to do without an equivalent value of horse flesh or man labor.

A Modern Columbus.

The I H C Gasoline Engine is a modern Columbus. It is rediscovering America, opening up new avenues of opportunity, making possible new economies and improvements, abolishing the back-breaking drudgeries which drive young men and women from the farm, and setting a new standard of comfort for rural life in America. It is a familiar sight, both in city and country, wherever a comparatively small unit of power is desired. It is specially valuable as a portable engine. It carries its own fuel supply in compact form and is self-contained in every way.

USE AND CARE OF THE FARM SEPARATOR.

By J. H. Frandson, M.S.A., Professor of Dairying, University of Idaho, Moscow, Idaho.
Reprinted by permission of Metropolitan and Rural Home.

In recent years no piece of farm machinery has been more universally used and accepted than has the farm separator. In the western states, especially, it is now the exception rather than the rule to find a single dairy that does not claim a hand separator as part of its equipment. This marvelous growth has been made in spite of a great deal of bitter opposition from those who, in many respects, should have been its best friends. There is no doubt that it has materially increased the profits and reduced the labor of the dairy farm, and thus has helped to solve some of the most serious economic problems confronting the dairy farmer. Even in the middle west, where the whole milk creameries so stubbornly fought the advance of the separator, they are now used to the extent that hardly a creamery can be found that has not been forced to accept farm separator cream. The merits of the separator, whether factory or hand separator, are now so well known that they hardly need a defense, though there is still a class of dairy men who stick to the shallow pan, or worse, to the dilution separator. If this class of farmers would make a careful study of the work which has been done by several of our experiment stations to determine the efficiency of the various methods of skimming they would find some very interesting results in favor of the centrifugal separator.

A COMPARISON OF DIFFERENT METHODS OF SKIMMING.

The Indiana experiment station made comparative tests of the skim milk from three different methods of skimming. It determined the relative loss of butterfat in each case as follows:

	Butterfat.
By "dilution separator" (the tin can kind) skim milk contained	0.57 per cent
By shallow pan skim milk contained	0.50 per cent
By centrifugal separator skim milk contained	0.05 per cent

Taking this table as a basis it will be interesting to note what the loss would be on a dairy farm of ten cows, considering a cow to yield about 5,500 pounds of skim milk annually. Basing the percentage of loss on the experiment carried on at the Indiana station and converting the butterfat into butter, we have the following table:

By "dilution separator" method on yield of 10 cows annually a loss of 382 lbs. of butter at	30c	$114.00
By shallow pan method on yield of 10 cows annually a loss of 335 lbs. of butter at	30c	100.50
By centrifugal separator method on yield of 10 cows annually a loss of 33.5 lbs. of butter at	30c	10.05

A study of this table should convince the reader that by the use of a good separator he should be able to make an additional saving of from $90 to $100 a year on a herd of ten cows, a saving more than sufficient to pay for the separator in one year. In addition to this direct saving it is well to keep in mind the greatly enchanced value of the skim milk for feeding purposes when fed in a sweet, wholesome, undiluted condition.

There are many things about the hand separator that appeal strongly to the former patron of the whole milk creamery. He finds it easier and less expensive to deliver the comparatively small bulk of cream than to haul the whole milk as formerly, which also necessitated hauling the skim milk. Then again, there is the advantage of having the sweet milk for feeding to calves, pigs and poultry. The use of the hand separator on the farm also does away with the danger of having the skim milk mixed and perhaps contaminated with disease-infected milk received at the creamery.

SELECTION OF SEPARATORS.

In selecting the separator the farmer should use the same good judgment that is so necessary in the selection of any kind of machinery. From a practical standpoint there is but little difference in the skimming efficiency of any of the standard makes of centrifugal separators now on the market. Durability, ease of running, ease with which they are cleaned, are the points of primary importance in buying a new separator. There are many cheaply constructed machines now on the market that are dear at any price, and with which the dairyman cannot afford to take any chances.

SETTING OF MACHINE.

After having purchased some good standard make of separator the first thing of interest is to have the machine well set. It is desirable to have a good, substantial foundation for the support of the machine. Concrete foundation, of course, is highly desirable. If it is found necessary to place the machine on a wooden floor this should be braced underneath by planks placed crosswise under the flooring where the separator is to stand. When fastening the separator down it should be leveled as directed by the manufacturer, generally on the surface of the frame. The separator bowl spinning around as it does like a top, will try to run perpendicular, and if the machine is not level there will be more or less useless wear on the sides of the bowl as it pushes in that direction. This not only shortens the life of the machine but results in poor skimming as well.

Next to having the machine set perfectly comes the question of having it well oiled. Use only the best grade of a thin oil, one that will not stick or gum on any of the parts. In case any of the parts should become gummed, it is a good plan to flush them occasionally with kerosene, which also will remove the dust and grit that may accumulate from time to time.

As most manufacturers have carefully tested their machines and know exactly under what conditions they do maximum and most satisfactory work, it is always safe and highly desirable for the operator to follow strictly the directions given by the manufacturer as regards the care and speed of the machine.

CLEANING THE SEPARATOR.

Washing the separator is not a very difficult job if done soon after separation. To thoroughly clean the separator, the bowl and all its parts should first be rinsed with cool water to remove all particles of milk. Then they should be thoroughly scrubbed with a brush in warm water containing a liberal quantity of good washing powder. The water for washing should be warm, but not hot enough to cook the curd on any of the parts. After washing, they should be steamed or at least rinsed in boiling water. No wiping cloth of any kind should be allowed to come in contact with them after the scalding process. Sunlight is one of the best disinfectants, and when possible all the utensils should be given the benefit of pure air and sunlight. If it is not convenient to wash the machine immediately after separating, the bowl can, at least, be taken apart and immersed in water. This will loosen all the curd and make washing comparatively easy.

No one should place much confidence in any agent's claim of separators being able to wash themselves by simply running water through them. Such claims are not made by men who have the dairyman's interests at heart.

Cream Separator Essentials

Men who know dairy farm needs are agreed that the three essentials of a good cream separator are reliability, easy running, and ease of thorough cleansing; and the first of these is reliability.

Reliability—meaning the capacity to skim closely for a very long time without undue expense for repairs—is a strong feature of I H C separators.

It is secured by the use of the finest material for all parts, put together carefully by skilled workmen, according to the most approved mechanical design. The result is an lasting—easy running—easy to clean.

I H C Cream Harvesters have dirt arresters in the bowls, which exclude all foreign matter from the skimming bowl. They have spiral cut gears, which insure steady motion and long wear. All bearing bushings are phosphor bronze—essential to a high-grade machine. Gears and working parts are easy to get at, to keep clean, and to oil.

With all these advantages in their favor, I H C Cream Harvesters deserve your careful consideration. See the I H C local dealer or write direct for catalogues.

DISK HARROW, ITS USE AND ABUSE.

By H. W. Campbell.

Editor's note:—Mr. H. W. Campbell has done more than any other man, living or dead, to reclaim the semi-arid districts. His method of farming has demonstrated beyond doubt that farmers can raise reasonably good crops on an annual rain fall of twelve inches.

In 1883 Mr. Campbell was a farmer in Brown county, S. D. Peculiar conditions in that year, when 260 acres of his farm gave almost no crop and forty acres gave a good crop, forced Mr. Campbell to begin thinking why. Since that time his experiments and practical demonstrations have been scattered from Central Texas to Alberta, Canada. He has demonstrated beyond any doubt that it is possible to farm successfully in the semi-arid regions. That he has awakened interest along this line of farming is evidenced by the tenor of utterances of such men as James J. Hill of the Great Northern railway and W. C. Brown, president of the New York Central railway.

"Tillage, better tillage, of the right kind and at the right time, is the keynote to-day of all successful farming," says Mr. Campbell.

There is no agricultural implement more important to the western farmer than the disk harrow. But like other farm implements, from its first conception it has undergone changes—some have been improvements, others have been disadvantages; the principal reason that all changes have not been improvements is that from its first conception to the present time its usefulness has been more or less misunderstood. Thousands of acres of wheat have been put in by the use of the disk harrow alone that have not turned the farmer any profit, and many times a loss of not only his labor, but seed. The great value of the disk harrow lies in its adaptability to the protection of moisture, the destruction of weeds, the preparation of the surface soil for the encouragement of rapid percolation of the rain water, and in thoroughly pulverizing a somewhat cloddy plowed field and obtaining an improved physical or mechanical condition of the soil. It has been used on thousands of acres instead of plowing when it should have been used to precede the plow. We have noted instances where the early spring use of the disk for the sole purpose of preventing evaporation and preparing the surface to receive and utilize further rains has resulted in giving the farmers increased yields of corn, as high as twenty bushels to the acre. Think of twenty bushels of corn per acre for only 50 cents of extra expense!

In handling of fields for summer culture there is no tool that can take the place of the disk harrow, cost of labor and value of work considered. Bear in mind this fact, that the great value of summer culture is not alone in the storing and conserving of the rain water, but in obtaining a soil condition for the promotion of nitrification and other chemical actions, for the development of the necessary elements to promote a vigorous, prolific growth of all plants. To promote nitrification every possible effort must be put forth to prevent the loss of moisture from the firm soil beneath the mulch. In doing this, three detrimental conditions must be carefully watched and as far as possible prevented. First, the growth of weeds and all foreign vegetation; second, the getting of the soil mulch too fine by the sometimes necessary frequent cultivation of the soil; third, to have the mulch too light and loose. No tool ever in use on our fields has accomplished the above as effectually as the disk harrow with the small diameter of disk.

The disk harrow may be used to prepare a field for a crop in the spring on autumn plowed land, because of the complete pulverizing and thorough separating of the soil into small coils in its rotating action, and when the proper diameter of disk is used, the work is perfect; but here, too, the small disk is by far the most effective, as the larger disk cuts too deeply.

We most urgently advise the use of the disk early in the spring on all stubble ground that may have been left over the winter without plowing. No time should be lost after the soil has become sufficiently thawed and dry so that it will not stick to the disk. This is especially true where corn is to be put in with a lister. For best results, double disk the ground by lapping one-half, the object being to thoroughly pulverize and loosen the surface, for reasons above referred to, as well as to break the hard, crusted surface to promote a more rapid and complete soaking into the soil below of the early spring rains. For this work the diameter of the disk is not so vital.

In still another season of the year we find the disk harrow of great value, and that is immediately after the small grain or any other crop is removed. It is advisable whenever possible to follow behind the harvester and not allow the packed, crusted soil to be exposed for a single day to the sun's rays after the crop is gathered. It is very difficult to explain the value and importance of this work in sufficiently strong terms to permit the reader to grasp its full force and meaning. We will endeavor, however, to give three reasons.

First: There is no time in the year when water, held in the soil near the surface in sufficient quantities, will bring about so many valuable chemical changes as during the months of July and August, and these changes mean additional bushels to the next crop. But they will not take place if the per cent of moisture is too low or there is a crust over the surface or under the mulch. The surface must be loose and the soil must carry the necessary quantity of both air and water. The better the farmer understands these facts the greater will his yield per acre continue from year to year.

Second: If there is any moisture in the soil at harvest time, though it be a few inches down below, by preparing a mulch of liberal thickness this moisture will accumulate by capillary attraction, which nature has provided under these conditions shall be largely upward as far as the soil is firm, stopping beneath the mulch or loosened soil. If no rains come, your ground in a few days is in perfect condition to plow because of this increased moisture. If you wish to list your corn and not plow in the fall, this moisture can be carried over until the next spring; then by early disking, and in case of a dry spring your field can be planted and the seed will immediately germinate and grow, while your neighbor who has not taken the advantage of these scientific principles is worrying about a dry country, and immediately becomes pessimistic on all questions. Luck was against him; everybody and everything was against him. But really the only thing against him was his lack of knowledge regarding the merits of the disk harrow and the true principles of scientific soil culture.

Third: In case you wish to sow fall wheat this disking behind the harvester may mean ten to twenty bushels more per acre in your crop next year. By holding the moisture as shown above, it will be seen that any subsequent rain will percolate more quickly and deeper. If the rain be a heavy one, sufficient to dissolve and pack the loosened surface, the common spike tooth harrow should be thoroughly used as soon as the soil is dry enough not to stick. If the soil is made quite firm, then the disk harrow should be used again, unless you are able to soon finish your plowing, in which case the second disking would not be advisable, as the common harrow would loosen enough to hold the moisture for a short time.

$500.00 for Three Days' Work

A boy in Edwards County, Kansas, made $500 by three days' work following the binder with a disk harrow; i. e., the ground he treated in this manner with a disk harrow produced 42 bushels and 10 pounds of wheat to the acre, while that of the rest of the farm, planted in the ordinary way, without disking, produced only 25 bushels.

A farmer in Decatur County, Iowa, raised 109 bushels and 40 pounds of corn to the acre because he disked the ground.

These are two instances—one a grain grower and the other a corn grower. In both cases the increased yield was due to the use of the disk harrow. The grain grower was in a district where rainfall is not so abundant as it is where the corn grower lives, but both raised bumper crops.

No matter whether it is a wet year or dry year, the disk harrow properly used will increase the yield, because disking prevents surface evaporation and conserves the sub-surface moisture needed by growing crops.

I H C Disk Harrows give good service in all conditions of ground. This is absolutely necessary if the best results are to be obtained. The disks are made to both penetrate and pulverize the ground in the best possible manner. The frames are strong, holding the gangs to the work at all times.

The I H C line of tillage implements includes disk harrows, spring tooth harrows, vineyard harrows, combination harrows, peg tooth harrows, and cultivators. These are made in various styles and sizes, so that no matter in what section you farm, we can give you the tillage implement designed for your special needs.

There is an I H C local dealer in your vicinity who will explain to you all the good points of I H C tillage implements. For catalogues address

INCREASING FERTILITY.

By Cyril G. Hopkins, Professor of Agronomy, College of Agriculture, University of Illinois.

If he who made two blades of grass grow where only one grew before is a public benefactor, then he who reduces the fertility of the soil so that only one ear of corn grows where two have been grown before is a public curse.

Agriculture is the fundamental support of the American nation, and soil fertility is the absolute support of agriculture.

THE TWO FUNCTIONS OF THE SOIL.

The soil has two distinct functions to perform in crop production: First, the soil must furnish a home for the plant, where the roots can penetrate the earth upon which the plant must stand; second, the soil must furnish plant food, or nourishment, for the growth, development and maturing of the plant.

To improve the physical condition of the soil is to improve the home of the plant; while to add to the soil, or to liberate from the soil fertilizing materials, is to increase the available supply of plant food.

One soil may furnish an excellent home for the plant, but a very insufficient supply of plant food; while another soil may contain abundance of plant food, but the physical conditions (such as imperfect drainage, or inadequate aeration) may be such as to make an unfit lodging place for the plant.

THE TEN ESSENTIAL PLANT FOOD ELEMENTS.

There are ten different elements of plant food, each of which is absolutely essential to agricultural plants. These elements are carbon, hydrogen, oxygen, nitrogen, phosphorus, potassium, calcium, magnesium, iron and sulphur.

Carbon, hydrogen and oxygen, which constitute more than 90 per cent of most agricultural plants, are contained in air and water, the supply being unlimited. The two elements, iron and sulphur, although absolutely essential to plant growth, are required in very small amounts, while they are provided by nature in practically inexhaustible quantities.

On the other hand, the five elements, nitrogen, phosphorus, potassium, calcium and magnesium, are required by plants in very considerable amounts, and soils are frequently found which are so deficient in one or more of these five elements as to limit the yields of crops. It should be understood that soils are never found which are entirely devoid of these elements. Even the poorest and most unproductive soils still contain at least some small supply of each of these elements, and as a general rule such so called exhausted soils contain at least one, and frequently two or three, of these valuable elements in large amount, the low productive capacity being due to the deficiency of one or two elements only.

Sometimes the element which the plant fails to obtain in sufficient quantity for its normal growth, the element which positively limits the yield of the crop, is actually present in the soil in very large amount. In such cases the practice should not be to add to the soil more of this plant food element, but to adopt methods of soil treatment and management by which we can liberate a sufficient amount of this element for maximum profitable crop yields.

THE VALUE OF FARM MANURE.

Farm manure always has been and probably always will be one of the most important and abundant materials for soil improvement. It is a necessary product on every farm, and on stock farms a product which accumulates in very large amounts. If not used for soil improvement, it becomes a worthless nuisance about the stables, whether in the city or in the country.

A conservative estimate places the annual production of farm manure in the United States at a billion tons. The actual agricultural value of fresh farm manure containing both the liquid and solid excrements is not less than $2 a ton, whether the value is measured in terms of plant food elements actually contained in the manure as determined by chemical analysis of the manure and the market values of the elements or whether the value is measured by the actual increase in crop yields produced by the use of the manure on ordinary long cultivated soils.

WASTE OF FARM MANURE AND LAND RUIN.

If fresh farm manure is thrown out and exposed to the weather for six months in summer, one-half of its total weight of dry matter is lost, and more than one-half of its value as a fertilizer is lost. In most newer countries there is enormous and shameful if not wicked waste of farm manure. In older countries it is the rule to save all possible farm manure with very great care, although this rule is too frequently broken by the careless, ignorant, or short sighted.

As a whole, the unnecessary waste and loss of farm manure which occurs in the United States each year is equal in value to several times the value of all commercial fertilizers used in this country. Sometimes the waste of farm manure and the purchase of commercial fertilizers occur upon the same farm. In such cases the commercial fertilizer used is usually a so called "complete" fertilizer, containing acid phosphate with a trace of nitrogen and potassium too small to add appreciably to its value, and it is commonly applied in amounts which supply less plant food than the crops actually remove, the small amount of soluble plant food applied being supplemented by that which the soil would naturally give up, together with what can be forced from the soil by the stimulating action of the soluble corrosive acid salts and manufactured land plaster contained in such fertilizers.

One of the most common commercial fertilizers used in the United States contains the equivalent of 2 per cent of ammonia, 8 per cent of falsely so called "phosphoric acid," and 2 per cent of potash, corresponding to less than four pounds of nitrogen, seven pounds of phosphorus, and less than four pounds of potassium in 200 pounds, the most common application per acre; whereas a 100 bushel crop of corn removes from the soil not four, but 150 pounds of nitrogen, not seven, but twenty-three pounds of phosphorus, and not four, but seventy-five pounds of potassium.

SAVING FARM MANURE.

In order to retain the full amount and full value of farm manure, it should be removed directly from the stall or covered feed lot and spread at once upon the land. Where the winters are moderately cold and free from heavy rains there is little loss if the manure is allowed to accumulate during such weather in a small, uncovered feed lot, provided it is hauled out and spread upon the land in the early spring. Manure may be allowed to accumulate without much loss in deep stalls for several weeks if plenty of absorbent bedding is used, and then it may be hauled from the stall directly to the field and spread.

It should be the rule never to handle manure more than once. When taken from the stable or feeding shed it should be at once loaded onto the spreader and hauled to the field. If manure is produced at the rate of two loads or more a week, the convenience and importance of taking this manure directly from the stable and spreading it at once upon the field will certainly justify providing a manure spreader or special wagon to be used solely for this purpose.

Farm Land Demands Fair Treatment

Farm land is like a factory. It is supplied with raw material in the form of seed. From this raw material it manufactures a finished product called a crop.

In the process of manufacturing a crop, the land uses certain elements which pass from it into the growing grain. When the grain is harvested, these elements are lost to the soil. They must be returned if the soil is to continue to raise profitable crops.

Nature has provided a medium for the return of plant food to the soil. Fresh stable manure contains all the elements needed to preserve soil fertility. When it is applied properly, it returns to the soil nearly, if not quite, all the plant food which was removed by the growing crop.

Practical—Durable—Artistic—Inexpensive
GUARANTEED for 10 YEARS WITHOUT COATING

A practical roofer, with thirty years' experience in selling and applying other makes, recently used our "Burmite" for roofing his own building—which, by the way, was a flat roof—although he had on hand at the time a large stock of the other kinds he had been selling. In speaking of the many advantages of "Burmite" he writes us:—"It is not necessary to take off your shoes for fear of damaging the storm-resisting and fire-retarding surface of a "Burmite" Roof—the strongest and most durable made."

"There is no other paper in the city which will spend as much money for news as will THE CHICAGO DAILY NEWS. During the Japanese-Russian war it had a number of special correspondents at the scene of the strife, who had at their constant disposal a special boat to aid in collecting the news and furnishing it to the Chicago public quickly. THE DAILY NEWS dispatch boat was the only one in commission for an American newspaper. It is not to be wondered at where a newspaper has so many excellent features that it becomes the strongest and best liked paper in the community."—Mail Order Journal.
